

JUDGE ROSA DENIES HE IS OR EVER WAS A MEMBER OF KLAN

Senatorial Candidate Says Blaine Was on Both Sides of Klan Question

Madison (AP)—Judge Charles D. Rosa, independent candidate for United States senator today denied affiliation at any time with the Ku Klux Klan in replying to intimations of John B. Chase, chairman of the Republican gubernatorial nominee, alleged Mr. Rosa was linked with the charges made against Fred R. Zimmerman, Republican gubernatorial nominee, alleging a smug connection with the hooded order.

"To me," Mr. Rosa declared, "the religious guarantees of the constitution are most sacred and there is no way for which I have greater contempt than the stirring up of religious prejudices and racial hatreds."

In language verbatim with that used by Mr. Zimmerman, Mr. Rosa declared that he "never had been, is not now and never will be," a member of the Klan. The independent candidate also continued his attacks upon "Madison Ring" and Governor John J. Blaine.

His answer to Mr. Chase's charges were continued in a letter made public.

"The 'Madison Ring,' his reply stated 'under the dictatorship of Governor Blaine, long ago abandoned the progressive cause. When it now accuses the real progressives of being deserters, it is running true to form."

"But, Mr. Chase, who are you that accuses Fred Zimmerman and myself of not being progressives? When did you become a progressive and what have you done in the cause? I confess, I never heard that you were a progressive until you came to the State Senate and began abjectly to serve the Blaine 'ring.' Where were you, Mr. Chase, and on which side did you fight from 1896 to 1922, when the progressive faction was fighting for life?"

"In your letter you attempted to connect my candidacy with the Ku Klux Klan. I have not in the past, do not have now, and never will have any connection with the Klan. In 1923, your candidate for senator voted a bill directed against the Klan, after it has passed both houses of the legislature without division, and after the recent primary, the national head of the Klan announced that the Klan had nominated Governor Blaine presumably as a reward for his veto. As usual, we find John Blaine on both sides of this question."

TEACHERS DISCUSS WORK IN MORAL EDUCATION

Work in moral education was discussed at a meeting of the third and fourth grade teachers with the superintendent of schools Tuesday afternoon. Students who do not attend the Week-Day Religious school conducted by Dr. J. R. Denyes of Lawrence college, spend that hour a week on the study of moral education as outlined in a textbook by John King Clark. In other years the work has been outlined by the teachers and used in mimeographed form. Each teacher was given a copy of the book at Tuesday's meeting.

Geography, supplementary reading and writing committees met prior to the general meeting. Materials were distributed to the teachers by the writing committee for use in teaching the new economy method which will supplement the Palmer method. Charts, posters and other materials were given out and explained.

24 AT WEINER ROAST OF VOCATIONAL Y CLUB

Twenty-four members of the Vocational Y club, faculty of the vocational school, and prospective club members attended the club weiner roast Tuesday evening. Because of the cold weather the roast was held in the kitchen at the Allecia Park camp grounds, rather than at Greenpatch as had been planned. The group met at the Y. M. C. A. at 6 o'clock and hiked to the park.

H. F. Heilig, director of the school, John W. Pugh, boys' work secretary of the Y. M. C. A. and Richard Wenzel, club president, gave short talks after the roast. It was decided to hold the next meeting on Wednesday Monday to Tuesday. Howard Menzner, Lawrence student, is club leader.

Rumania's Beautiful Queen Is Greeted In America

Queen Marie, a diminutive American flag in her hand, on the steps of the New York City Hall immediately after her arrival. On her right is Grover Whalen, chairman of the mayor's committee of welcome, and on her left is Mayor Walker, from whose words she is evidently deriving keen amusement. Looking out over their heads at the multitude which jammed the City Hall esplanade from corner to corner are Princess Ileana (over Queen's right shoulder), Mrs. Astor (over Queen's left shoulder), Prince Nicholas (above Mayor's hat), attaches from the Roumanian legation in Washington and U. S. Army officers.

Democracy was honoring royalty when this picture was made. Queen Marie of Rumania had just arrived at the Washington union station from New York. At the left, a marine stands at "present arms." Then come Princess Ileana, Prince Nicholas, Queen Marie and Secretary of State Kellogg.

Queen Marie gazes upward appreciatively as the welcoming tug Macon, bearing her to the Battery from the Leviathan at Quarantine, passes close to the unnoticing Statue of Liberty.

Queen Marie Prepared To Meet Americans

BY GENE COHN
New York—Those Americans who have been grooming themselves in the etiquette of "how to meet a queen" will find that Her Majesty, Queen Marie of Roumania, already has made herself proficient in how to meet Americans.

The mother-in-law of the Balkans already has made herself the adopted daughter of everything America. It is a consummate actress who comes to this country under the robe of royalty, and all her cast has been carefully chosen.

Quite like an elaborately staged motion picture was the arrival of the royal party in New York. The stage was as carefully set—or perhaps over-set—as that of any large production. There even were ikons and crosses displayed in the royal cabin, and every other property and touch a director would think of was present. There was a band, of course. And, as movie bands so often are, the martial strains were slightly off key.

Marie dresses to the queen's taste, but no better than any other woman who buys at fashionable shops. Looking slightly older than her photographs show, clothed more plainly than descriptions of her wardrobe would indicate, Queen Marie might be just any one of the rather elderly actresses who arrive frequently for American tours.

If Queen Marie were going into the movies, the picture she would present would be much colored by the movie conception of what a queen should do on Yankee soil. If that is the role the American public wants her to play, she is quite willing. She can adapt herself to a comedy part when the occasion arises, as shown when reporters milled about her on the boat and asked questions in the vein of a comic strip. Undaunted, Marie tossed back her replies in exactly the same vein:

"Your Majesty, how do you eat our American buckwheat cakes?"

"One at a time," laconically answered the queen.

"Your Highness, is there any royal way of eating corn on the cob?"

"One can't be regal with an ear of corn."

Of all the stage properties, the most useful on the queen's trip is likely to be the overlooker far-away king, at home in Roumania.

The queen has no hesitation in the spotlight, until a political question is asked. Then she becomes the coy, weak woman. What has she to do

INDIANS COMPLAIN AGAINST NEGLECT OF 'WHITE FATHER'

Charge Children Are Sent to Schools Hundreds of Miles from Home

Charges that children in the government school at Lac du Flambeau on the Indian reservation in Vilas county were not receiving proper attention, food or medical care were made at a hearing before Congressman George J. Schneider of Appleton, at Laona, Monday, by representatives of the Pottowatomi Indian tribe. More than 100 Indians, including several chiefs, representing more than 500 Indians of the tribe, appeared at the hearing and made the complaints.

According to a treaty made with the United States government, the Indian children are to be educated by the government. Instead of establishing a school at the reservation at Laona, where it would be centrally located, the Indian children are being sent at present to various government schools in different sections of Wisconsin. The greater number of the children, that is 87 of 130 that are being sent to school, are at Lac du Flambeau. This school is more than 100 miles away from the homes of some of the children.

Children also are placed in schools at Pipe Stone, Minn., Tomah, Janesville, and Keshena, Wis., Toledo, Ia., and Hasky, Kan. These children are sent to the schools in the fall of the year and in many instances do not see their parents until the following summer.

It was shown that most of the Indians were too poor to travel to see their children and it was also brought out that there enough Indian children in the tribe to warrant building a government school on the reservation. Further investigation of the charges and complaints is to be made by Congressman Schneider, who announced that he will make every effort to have the government open a school near Laona.

G. D. Ziegler, president of the Aid Association for Lutherans, was an Anglo visitor Wednesday. Albert Voelck, secretary of the association, was in West Bend on business.

EGGERT IS TREASURER OF G. O. P. COMMITTEE

William Eggert has been appointed treasurer of the Outagamie County Republican committee and donations to the campaign fund are expected to reach an imposing total, it was reported Wednesday. Pledges taken at a meeting Monday night indicate an unusual interest in the state fight at the general elections and county rallies will be organized, Mr. Eggert said.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Klein and the members of the orchestra which has played at Terrace Gardens for the past seven months left Monday for Tulsa, Okla., where they will play at a hotel.

NOT AN ARREST IN ELEVEN DAYS FOR RUM LAW VIOLATION

The country has gone dry—no longer do the scofflaws deny the fact in action, at least, for the police blotter shows a clean record for 11 days—and some odd hours. For the length of time stipulated not a case has developed through the police or municipal courts where an individual has been charged with the offense of imbibing too freely of spirituous liquor. This establishes a record for the city, it was pointed out Wednesday. On an average at least three arrests a week are reported, records for the past year show.

DRAMA GIRLS REHEARSE PLAYS

The dramatic workshop of Appleton Womens club will meet Thursday evening to rehearse plays to be given in November. Two one-act plays are in rehearsal by the group, "The Wonder Hat" by Goodman and Hecht and "The Trysting Place" by Booth Tarkington.

How I Keep My Waves

By Edna Wallace Hopper
My hair is curly, with never a Marcel. It always has a glow. The reason lies in a hair dress which experts made for me.

To keep it on a brush twice a week. To fluff my hair I comb it backward, and the fluff remains. For a curl, use combs or fingers in the usual way, and the curl will last. It keeps a permanent wave in the same way. Or it keeps hair sleek and smooth for those who want it, and does it without grease.

This remarkable hair dress is now supplied by all toilet counters. It is called "Edna Wallace Hopper's Wave and Sheen." The price is 75 cents.

No girl or woman will go without it when she once sees what it does. It multiplies the beauty of the hair and keeps it in the style one wishes. You will be delighted with it.

EDUCATION WEEK TO BE OBSERVED IN SCHOOLS HERE

Principals Decide to Carry Out Program Indorsed by National Societies

American Education week from Nov. 7 to 13 will be observed in Appleton schools according to the program projected by the National Education association, the American Legion and other organizations. It was decided at the meeting of principals of the high school with the superintendent of schools Tuesday morning. Formal programs probably will not be arranged but emphasis will be placed in the school work on the points stressed in the national plan. The week will open on Sunday with a For God and Country Day, for laws without the support of individual morality are powerless, the program states. The other six days will stress constitutional rights, patriotism, equal opportunities, peace with honor and security for Armistice day, know your school, and civic work is a means to an efficient community. A. G. Oosterhouse, principal of Roosevelt junior high school, was pointed to study the Clapp English tests. The Wisconsin department of education has written to each city superintendent asking that new testing systems be considered in the schools.

Students in the science courses in junior and senior high schools will take an extinction in the school buildings this year. It was decided. The principals felt that it would be a valuable lesson in practical science for the students, and it would save the city the expense of paying men to fill them. Students at the junior high schools will fill the extinction in their own buildings, and those in the senior high school will attend to those in that building and in the grade schools.

SCHIPA LIKES TO SING IN ENGLISH

Noted Tenor Wants His Audience to Understand Words of Songs

Tito Schipa who wants to give Americans the kind of music that every people loves best, songs in their own language, will sing at the Lawrence Memorial chapel Tuesday evening, Oct. 26, under the auspices of the Community Artist series.

There is no reason why recital programs should be in foreign languages, the great tenor said. "The words of a song have as much meaning as the melody. How can you expect an audience to appreciate that which it only half understands? The prejudice against English as a singing medium is something which I cannot understand."

"To me English is far more adapted to vocal purposes than is French. And so, this season, I want to give programs including English as well as Italian, Spanish and French," Schipa continued.

The celebrated tenor who has been on the American concert stage for three seasons, has triumphed everywhere his lovely voice has been heard. He could have continued to sing songs in foreign languages and repeated the success he has so widely won. But Schipa wants to give the public what it wants all of the time. He believes that in doing this one will be not only a successful artist but a great one for great art is popular art, he maintains.

For several years the lyric tenor devoted his entire time to singing in grand opera, but since his presentation to the concert stage he has shown a decided preference for concert singing. He has become world-famed and has been acclaimed by many as the greatest living tenor.

REALTY TRANSFERS

Showing an unusual activity for this late time in the year several real estate transfers were recorded with Albert G. Koch, register of deeds, Tuesday.

One of the important individual transactions was embodied in the purchase of the Wisconsin property in the Second ward on which the Gas plant is situated. The amount involved was reported as $1,500 and title was made over from the C. M. and St. P. railroad.

Other transfers included: Thomas Prunty to Theodore Vandeyacht, 79 acre farm in town of Seymour; Rose K. Wurdinger to Annie Hietpas, lot in Little Chute; Elmer Real Estate Co. to Joseph Vanoverhoven, lot, Kaukauna; August Brandt to W. E. Le May, Oshkosh, lot in New London, and Mike Vandehy to John Hoek, property at Little Chute.

CADY WILL VOTE FOR RESTORATION OF BEER

Madison — (AP) — Virgil H. Cady, Democratic gubernatorial nominee Tuesday announced that he would vote for restoration of 2.75 per cent beer as proposed in a referendum to be submitted to Wisconsin voters, November 2.

His announcement was in reply to a query by the Capital Times, local newspaper, which was sent to each of the 28 candidates for state offices, asking whether they would vote "yes" or "no" on the referendum. Thomas M. Kearney, Democratic senatorial nominee answered the query late Monday saying he would vote "no" on constitutional grounds. "In case our people desire to legalize the manufacture and sale of beer with an alcoholic content of 2.75 per cent" he said, they must amend the eighteenth amendment.

Benjamin W. Reynolds, socialist nominee for Attorney general announced that he would vote affirmatively on the referendum ballot.

ANNOUNCE WINNERS IN ESSAY CONTEST

Two Appleton Students Win
Prizes in Contest Sponsored by W. C. T. U.

Two Appleton school students won the first prizes in the Outagamie-co. essay contest of the Women's Christian Temperance union. It was announced in the schools. Miss Betty Rettler, a student in the seventh grade at the McKinley junior high school, and Vernon Beckman, of the seventh grade in the Roosevelt junior high school, winners in the city contest last spring, were awarded the county prizes.

The contest was conducted in the sixth grades of the grammar schools and 130 children of the county competed. Miss Rettler was then in the Fourth ward school sixth grade and Mr. Beckman in the Columbus school. Second prizes in the county went to Miss Ruth Leatherbury and William Sager, both of Black Creek.

A series of exercises were presented to the competitors in the contest, such as questions asking what qualities of the grain were used in making food stuffs, alcoholic liquors and others; what the conversation would be between an automobile driver who drank and one he asked to ride with him; and other discussions pertaining to the temperance problem. My Total Abstinence Book was the title of the set of exercises. Winners of the local contests were entered in the county competition.

Students Preparing To Write Essays On News

An essay contest on the best news story of the week published in the Appleton Post-Crescent was opened for students at Appleton high school Monday. The first prize award will be announced on Thursday, Oct. 23, and the winning essay and the one gaining honorable mention will be published in the paper of that day.

Each Tuesday competitors in the contest will submit their compositions at the school. Wednesday they will be judged by H. H. Helble, principal of the high school, Miss Adela Klumb, head of the English department, and a member of the Post-Crescent staff.

If two essays are found by the judges to be of equal value and to rank above the others in the week's group of compositions, each writer will receive the prize, which will be $2.50 to every winning essay, and each article will be published.

In choosing the best Post-Crescent story of the week, the students should consider the effect on local conditions and people. Whether it is about local situations does not matter, it may be a world situation. But what is its effect on the people of Appleton? The points to be considered by the judges is the value of the story itself, the reasons of the writer for choosing this story, and the style and manner of the writer. Any story may be selected that has been printed in the Post-Crescent from Monday through Saturday's issues. The essay will then be written before the following Tuesday.

A limit has been placed at 250 words but a fewer number may be submitted and will be given impartial consideration with the longer compositions. The name of the writer will not appear on the essay, but will be enclosed in a sealed envelope and given to the teacher with the essay. It will not be opened until after the judges' decision has been made.

Any student in the three classes in the school is eligible for the competition.

DEFICIT IN STREET
DEPARTMENT FUND

Alderman Urged to Help Menasha Get State Aid for Tay-co-st Bridge

Menasha—While the finance committee budget had a balance of more than $16,000 on Sept. 30, the street committee budget was overdrawn on that date to the extent of nearly $20,000, according to the financial statement of City Clerk J. F. DeCaro submitted Tuesday night at the monthly meeting of the common council. Some of the other budgets showed a deficit, particularly that of the bridge committee.

Balances of budgets Sept. 30: Finance committee, $16,043.30; fire and city hall committee, $7,545.59; police committee, deficit, $16,787.81; printing committee, deficit, $15,731.00; health committee, deficit, $8,732.30; street committee, deficit, $19,758.61; bridge committee, deficit, $24,451.96; cemetery committee, deficit, $9,947. The report was accepted and placed on file.

Mayor N. G. Remmel announced that some time previous Alderman Baldwin received a letter from Taylor & Koller, Appleton lawyers, asking what disposition should be made of Alex. Price's annotated book which is still at Schommer's undertaking establishment in that city. Mayor Remmel stated that at the time the book was annotated the attorney expected it to be the subject of a lawsuit against Taylor & Koller, and that it was the council's duty to take up the matter of having the law so changed that Menasha could secure state aid at the next meeting of the legislature. Under the present law the state cannot appropriate money for the building of a bridge less than 300 feet long, he said.

He suggested that the aldermen take the matter up with state representatives at once. Alder Anton Brezniski said he took the matter up some time ago with the state attorney and with some of the state officials and they appeared to be willing to do all they could to assist Menasha to get state aid.

"Only one bid was received for the purchase of the municipal bathhouse, and that was withdrawn when it was brought out that a higher price could be secured. It was decided to advertise for bids returnable at the next meeting of the council on Oct. 7. It was also decided to readvertise for a new cemetery fence at Oak Hill cemetery, the bids to be returnable at the next meeting.

A petition for sewer and water main on Seventh—between Appleton and London—signed by 16 property owners was referred to the committee on streets, water and light. City Attorney Henry Fitzgibbon announced that he had prepared an ordinance relating to the appointment of the proposed furnace inspector and detailing his duties. After reading it, he said that an old ordinance passed in 1924 covered the matter fully but had never been enforced. He did not know just how the new ordinance would affect the old one. The council adjourned without taking any definite action.

SEES RECREATION FOR U. S. WORKERS IN 'BOOKS, MUSIC'

President of Pennsylvania
Labor Believes Arts Will Become Popular

Atlantic City.—(AP)—Light opera, lectures and music, rather than baseball or tennis, are the suitable recreations for workers in modern industry, declared James H. Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, in an address Wednesday before the Playground and Recreation association of America.

"The popularly accepted idea of recreation is athletic sports—running, jumping, swimming, golf, lawn tennis, and baseball," he said. "All these sports are without doubt very good for those who need that kind of recreation but few workers engaged in modern industry need them."

"The coal miner or steel worker can well afford to sit on the grandstand and watch the bank clerks play baseball. The bank clerk can well afford to play golf on a hot summer day while the coal miner sits under a shady tree reading a good book or listening to a band concert. Both will be getting the physical and mental recreation needed and both will be healthier, happier and better equipped to face the problems of life."

DEMAND SHORTER HOURS
To avoid industrial stagnation and unemployment, workers are demanding increased wages and decreased hours of labor. This, he said, means additional hours of leisure which should by all means be turned to good account.

Religion in America is superficial because it must make its appeal to people who are in a hurry, said Rabbi Abba Zillel Silver in another address. "The Kingdom of God comes without haste," said Dr. Silver. "The heart of the religious mood is meditation, the hushed and silent contemplation of life's profundities. But what American ever meditates? We need more time to get acquainted with ourselves. We should develop a new science—the Science of Leisure."

"We have not enough amateurs in our society—men who, out of sheer love of life, set about to utilize their leisure time purposefully and creatively. Our industrial civilization demands specialization, which tends to narrow man's mental and spiritual life. Most of us have only one world in which to live—the world of our vocations. For the purpose of earning a living—that is admirable. For the purpose of earning life—it is fatal."

COUNTY GETS $9,113
CHECK FROM STATE
County Treasurer Marie Ziegenhagen on Monday received a check for $9,113.16 from the Wisconsin State Highway Commission to be applied to the general maintenance fund of county roads, it was reported. The sum represents state aid money, it was stated.

Meet Chicago's Hanging Kids

BY ROY J. GIBBONS
NEA Service Writer
Chicago—Damon and Pythias a la "Able's Irish Rose" are at work most effectively in Chicago assisting the hangman.

In Emmet Byrne, 29, and Harold Levy, 25, dubbed "Mike and Ike" of the state's attorney's office, Jack Ketch has his ablest allies.

Since the first of the year "Mike and Ike" have fed the gallows with nine potential victims—murderers—all "Mike and Ike" convinced juries the nine ought to die.

The feat never before has been duplicated here. Chicago murderers usually go free, sped on their way with the sympathetic tears of a maudlin multitude.

THREE IN ONE WEEK
But "Mike and Ike" stopped that. In one week they secured death penalties for three killers in a row.

As their names would suggest Emmet is Irish and Harold is Jewish. They're the youngest prosecutors ever appointed to office here.

Just how they managed to upset spineless precedent in a hangless town where crime is rampant still is a matter of perplexity to master jurists.

The two, in their plans for death sentences, take their jobs as casually as eating their breakfast.

Coming down to the office they think of strategies whereby they can swing still another murderer from the gallows tree.

At lunch their talk again is on death and how they can have it legally administered.

Death has bound them in fellowship. It has bound them so fast, in fact, that they have moved to houses right across the street from each other.

Hard-boiled gangsters whose gun handles were notched to the end formerly laughed when older members of the prosecutor's office sought to bring them to the gibbet.

But when "Mike and Ike" get on the job, the faces of crookdom wear a different look.

THEY LOSE NO SLEEP
"Sending folks who deserve it to death never bothers our sleep," say the "hanging kids" in unison.

"We try to pick the defense to pieces. Most crooks when tried for murder start criticizing the police and the law in general. But when we show their evidence is just a flimsy smoke screen, we have got on a good piece toward the gallows with our load."

"It's a game with us and entirely impersonal. We never try to have a man hanged unless we sincerely believe he is guilty. Besides, the jury always can decide in the defendant's favor. We try to impress upon each juror that though the police do their duty, and we ours, and the judge his justice never can triumph unless each juror takes his share of the responsibility.

"The death penalty is not administered in the spirit of an 'eye for an eye' as of old. It is a deterrent for other youngsters who might follow crime's false paths."

NO PLEASURE IN IT, BUT—
"And why should we lose sleep over some murderer whom we have sent to the gallows?" asks Byrne.

"You have to think of the grief that the crime has caused others. We don't get any pleasure out of sentencing a fellow to death. But if he's guilty we feel it our duty to see that he gets his just deserts."

The "hanging kids" are self-made and self-trained. Both earned their educations through college and law school.

The Jew and the "Irish" have proved unshakable against some of the highest-priced legal talent to be had.

The "Irish" supplies the wit, and the Jew thinks out the next move. Occasionally the Jew tells the jury a funny story to relieve the monotony. Then the jury retires.

When it comes back to announce its finding the defendant stirs uneasily. "Death," says the jury.

The "hanging kids" have won again. Each man to his own calling. Death seems to be the thing that "Mike and Ike" work at best.

TRAFFIC INCREASE IS NOTED ON RIVERS

Slight Gain Over Preceding
Month Is Reported by Engineer

A slight increase in traffic on the Fox river was noted in September over August, according to the monthly traffic report of the United States engineer's office. The slight gain was felt at every lock on the river.

At De Pere the number of lockages increased from 291 in August to 293 in September and the tonnage carried through the locks there increased from 35,650 to 35,650. At Kaukauna the number of lockages decreased from 243 to 220 but the tonnage increased from 37,132 to 38,712. The largest gain at any single lock was noted at Little Chute where the number of lockages increased from 187 to 198 and the tonnage increased from 23,186 to 24,503.

The increase at the Cedars lock at Kimberly was from 187 to 197 lockages and the tonnage from 29,070 to 31,991. At Appleton the lockages decreased from 142 to 133 but the tonnage increased from 18,871 to 19,496. At Menasha the lockages decreased from 196 to 172 but the tonnage increased from 6,244 to 6,239.

BANKS ARE WARNED OF BAD PAYROLL CHECKS

Merchants and banks of Outagamie co. have received a warning to be on the lookout for spurious payroll checks believed to be the work of an organized gang of "paper-hangers" who recently flooded Milwaukee with more than $3,000 worth of bad checks in a few days.

The men, it is believed, have either a printing plant of their own or are in touch with a crooked printer who reproduces the checks of industrial plants on which the gang intends to prey.

A check protector and writer is used in filling in the checks and every effort is made to make them appear genuine paychecks.

The method of cashing is said to be principally to have a woman member of the gang assume the role of wife of a working man whom she tells merchants was recently employed by the firm whose forgery she offers.

THIS IS A NEW ONE

As the larger vista of a national service opens up before Mr. Blaine with the senatorial toga almost within his grasp, his fertile mind is already leaping from crag to crag that he may be better established in the future. In our Wisconsin politics Mr. Blaine has been a Don Quixote, running his lance through Wall street windmills to their utter discomfort and dismay. Every time Wall street tried to purchase Wisconsin, Mr. Blaine saved the people from the shackles of their bondage. But the Wall street argument is now small town stuff to Mr. Blaine. It is altogether too provincial. It can hardly be put into his class. He is now after the "international bankers" as more qualified to take his time and efforts. Why, indeed, should the colossal mentality of Mr. Blaine bother itself about four-flushers from Wall street?

Mr. Blaine has discovered in conjunction with some others of similar caliber "that there is a plan on to saddle the war debts owing by other nations upon the American people." Of course the plan is not looked upon with favor by the peasants and laborers of Europe, but is merely the crooked work of "international bankers." And Mr. Blaine is going to save the United States from the insidious wiles of such like. He's just going to stand up straight with a two-edged sword and battle on to protect the American taxpayer.

Mr. Blaine is really treading on dangerous ground, but that need bother him little because if he finds that it is dangerous he will be running true to form by jumping on the other side of the question. In reality Mr. Blaine is aligning himself with Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury, and with Calvin Coolidge, president of the United States, who, despite storms of criticism and defamation, have insisted that the foreigners must pay their bills insofar as they are financially able to meet them.

Mr. Blaine's statement runs along the lines of a recent article by Mr. Mellon in the Saturday Evening Post. Could it be possible that Mr. Blaine reads that periodical? Anyway, Mr. Blaine's fight against Wall street bankers kept him in office in Wisconsin for a long time. What is more reasonable than to conclude that the "international bankers" argument will keep him in a national office an equal length of time? Still, every day, evidence is accumulating that the people are becoming conscious of the fact that Mr. Blaine's public statements are mostly quackgrass and about as useful.

OUR RICH POSTOFFICE
Though we have come to think of post-service as a national white elephant, recent inquiry into some of its items reveals that the postoffice on an actual commercial basis, setting aside the free services it performs by order of congress and considering only its bona fide mail delivery to paying customers, actually turned in a profit of $100,000,000 last year.
On the books it showed a deficit of $40,000,000. But against that deficit write off the following free services:
Rural free delivery, at a total loss of $90,000,000.
Star routes, loss of $10,000,000.
"Franked" and "Penalty" mail, loss of $15,000,000.
Special rate to preferred religious, fraternal and scientific publications, loss of $11,000,000.
Free-in-county publications, loss of $7,000,000.
Foreign mail, loss of $5,000,000.
Air mail, loss of $2,000,000.
These services causing a loss of $140,000,000 are not necessarily improper or unwise merely because they cost money. They are promotion enterprises of the United States government for a number of wholly laudable causes. Rural free delivery is here to stay and is worth, in an intangible way, in the boosting of farm industry and improvement of farm connections with selling and buying markets, more than it costs. The same is true of most of the others, though not the franking fraud. But a legitimate question is whether we should charge these services against the paying branches of postal delivery, forcing mail which already returns a $100,000,000 profit to be burdened with additional stamps to carry this $140,000,000 deadweight dumped on the postoffice as a matter of general public policy.

Shouldn't this free service for promotion purposes come out of the national treasury?

RUSSIAN PROPAGANDA

Some of our advanced politicians, reformers and super-progressives have been wailing and weeping over Russia's alleged mistreatment by the United States. They have been demanding recognition of the soviet for several years. Some of them went to Europe to "see things for themselves," and after being wine and dined by a few prominent bolsheviks, came back with glowing details of the Russian experiment. All the radicals in America are for the bolsheviks and have demanded recognition. Many of our demagogues in public life have echoed this demand, believing it would make them popular with labor. There has been enough fraud and misrepresentation about sovietism to deceive the whole world, but fortunately it has not done so.

One of the agencies that has not been fooled by Russian propagandists, both here and abroad, is the American Federation of Labor. It has kept a close eye on the workings of the soviet system, and all its activities in other countries, with the result that it opposes both as utterly un-American, and takes a square stand against recognition of bolshevism by the United States government. While the Federation has annually turned down a minority report favoring the soviet government, this year the action of the national convention at Detroit was unanimous, due to the exposure of communist activity in boring within the United Mine Workers. The soviet regime was denounced as "the most unscrupulous, most antisocial, most menacing institution in the world today." Almost on the same day, that this took place, the British labor party at Margate reaffirmed its opposition to communist membership in the party by a vote of 15 to 1.

The two factors which have turned responsible organized labor against the bolsheviks are, first, that the "communist" experiment, while professing to be a movement in behalf of the working classes, has done nothing but bring labor reform into disrepute and to compromise trade unionism everywhere. The second is that the communists have been endeavoring to secure control of labor bodies by "boring within." It has required the greatest vigilance and determination on the part of sane labor leaders to counteract communism and to keep its blighting hand off the labor movement.

The convention of the American Federation at Detroit has in effect indorsed the policies at Washington in dealing with the Russian situation. Its action will have the approval of the public generally.

MAN AND THE TREE
I ask no greater favor than to be
Friend of the sunshine, brother to a tree,
Neighbor to beauty, and in turn to give
Some little joy to others while I live;
To have in me that gift for happiness,
Which trees and stars and violets possess.

Men find delight in brooks and running streams,
Beneath a tree a weary traveler dreams,
Roses make glad innumerable hearts,
Unmeasured joy the morning sun imparts,
And since all nature wears a gentle grace,
So I with beauty would enrich my place.

Some stand enraptured, gazing on a tree,
So let men find some little charm in me.
Fancies are loved and welcomed in the spring,
The world grows brighter when the linnets sing,
Brother to these, I, too, would pay with mirth
And happy memories for my stay on earth.

Must the unthinking tree be kinder than I
To the weary, dusty fellow man?
Must men rejoice to see an elm at morn
And find no joy because I, too, was born?
Surely I have it in my power to be
As friendly and as gracious as a tree.

URIC ACID RARELY HAPPENS

Uric acid is not a poison. Large amounts of it injected into the blood of a normal person will cause no discomfort whatever. So the popular fancy that this and that ailment or trouble is caused by uric acid is not founded in fact. It is a fact, however, that if not scrupulously nostrum mongers, ordinary quacks and freak or fad healers, ordinary quacks and freak or fad healers, the acid obsession moves a lot of "eliminating," baths, food diet systems and the like, which without this obsession of the lay mind would be a drug on the market.

There is nothing in common between "uric acid" and "acidosis." The popular notion that "uric acid" is in some way concerned in "acidosis" or "acidity" of the blood is without any foundation in fact, but it comes in handy for the nostrum mongers, ordinary quacks and freak or fad healers, for it enables them to get away with a glib and to members of the "Wise & Helmer" family, plausible explanation for all kinds of human ailments and the way the hocus pocus remedy, diet or bath works! Paraphrasing the adage, a fool and his uric acid obsession are hard to part.

Bearing in mind the undebatable physiological fact that "uric acid" has nothing whatever to do with "acidosis" or "acid in the blood," we may safely mention, but not describe, the three or four disease conditions in which there is an excess of uric acid in the blood. Please take particular notice of two things, first, that these three or four diseases have nothing else in common and there is no reason to assume that they are due to a common cause or amenable to similar remedies; second, that in health there is a definite amount of uric acid in the blood, and it is only when special chemical examination reveals an excess over the normal proportion of uric acid in the blood that there is any significance attached.

Just how much uric acid one's blood normally contains need not worry us—we'll say roughly it is a wee pinch to the pint.

And now since it doesn't mean anything in particular, here are the names of the disease conditions in which, as a rule though not invariably, the chemical examination of the blood reveals a slight excess of uric acid: Gout, luecemia, pneumonia, nephritis. No such excess of uric acid is found in the various conditions which masquerade under the misleading name of "rheumatism." Incidentally, a physician or other person can infer from symptoms that there is "uric acid in the blood," or an excess of uric acid or uric acid trouble; this is a question which can be answered only by a chemical test of the blood, and it is the height of folly to dabble with medicines, diets, baths, mineral water or other things which purport to "eliminate" uric acid, if the question of an excess uric acid has not been first answered by this chemical measurement.

Even though a test has demonstrated an excess of uric acid in the blood, bear in mind that uric acid is not a poison, and with that fact fixed in mind go ahead and enjoy the hokum bath or the bunkum salts if you enjoy that sort of thing. But if it were my blood, and some good laboratory technician found an excess of uric acid in it, I'd say to my doctor: "Shucks, what's a couple milligrams of uric acid between friends—just what ails me, do you suppose?"

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

According to a report of a life insurance company is children, insured in the company died of poisoning in a year (1924). Seven of these children were killed by cathartic pills left around the house. The cathartic pills contained a dash of strychnine, but were coated with sugar or chocolate and tempted the children as other candy would. I believe the manufacturers of such pills or tablets should be given prison sentences for putting such a deadly poison in such an innocent appearing form. I feel rather strongly about this, because one of the little victims happened to be my son. (G. V. W.)
Answer—Agree with you. But why discriminate in the case of strychnine? There are many other deadly poisons which medicine manufacturers incorporate in the "harmless" shotgun concoction, or blunderbuss formulas without reason or restraint. Most of the fatalities from such poisoning are hushed up more or less, because publication of the facts is not very good for the business.
Crackers Are Food
Kindly tell me how much nourishment there is in crackers. (L. E. W.)
Answer—Bread rolls average 1,300 calories to the pound, crackers 1,800 calories to the pound. So that a lunch of crackers and milk is more nourishing than bread and milk.

HIGHBROWS IN PUBLIC LIFE
It is taken for granted by the average voter, in America at least, that the highbrow is not effective in public life. He may be all right in a professor's chair or in a pulpit or in the study, but he is not "practical enough" in public office. It is rather an amazing fact that when a man runs for office who is generally regarded as a highbrow it is absolutely necessary to assure the people that he has at one time been a director in a bank or some such reassuring fact, no matter how irrelevant it may be to his real character, or he cannot be elected.

But "The Intimate Papers of Col. House" bring out the fact that in the greatest crisis in modern times the highbrow did not play a less able part in the practical affairs of the world than the so-called "practical man." Such a book as Col. House's, without all intending to do so, calls attention to the remarkably large number of highbrows in public life in the leading nations of the world during the war. The book contains letters from all sorts of people and in those letters the writers frequently unconsciously reveal their highbrow tendencies.

HIGHBROWS IN WAR
Sir Edward Grey, universally regarded as one of the ablest and most practical (in the highest sense) foreign secretaries England has ever had and one of those who kept the respect of the world through everything, is always talking in his letters, in little asides, about stealing an hour off to read Wadsworth. By instinct he was highbrow to the very marrow of his bones and there was nothing he would have liked better than to devote himself to scholarly pursuits. But in addition to that he was one of the ablest men in public life during the war years.

Then of course there is President Wilson. The most damning charge that could be brought against him and was often brought against him was that he was a schoolmaster, hence a highbrow, hence no good in public life.

And he did not cease from being a highbrow in office. During the most anxious days of that troubled time he read poetry aloud to Col. House for an hour when the colonel went to see him after dinner on important international affairs. If that fact had leaked out at the time he could probably never have been re-elected. But even if all his faults and mistakes are given full prominence, he played a commanding part in the practical affairs of the world war when civilization seemed to be in the balance. It is questionable if the most practical lowbrow could have done much better under the same circumstances.

Another example—Brand Whitlock. Whitlock looked upon himself as a novelist, not as a public man. Even after the war he confessed that he would rather be worthy of touching the hem of the garment of literature than have any other distinction no matter how great. He was highbrow in the most damning sense of that word. But it is very unlikely that any practical man in America could have done better as ambassador to Belgium.

The same thing was true of Thomas Nelson Page in Italy. Walter Hines Page in England, Henry Van Dyke in Holland. In nearly every country America was represented by a highbrow at a time when such a person is most distrusted by the average American voter, and in nearly every case the highbrow did as well as anyone could have done.

PREJUDICE ILL FOUNDED
In England there were a number of highbrows in public or semi-public life during the war. Sir Horace Plunkett, Lord Morley, Herbert Asquith, Balfour, Lord Bryce, and a number of others took their part in the affairs of the nation, and the unprejudiced person will have to admit that they were as effective on the whole as the lowbrows, men like Lloyd-George and the others of that brand who are always described as "practical men."

In France the same thing was true. Clemenceau could certainly classify as a highbrow. Just recently he has come out with a scholarly book on Demosthenes. But no one will deny that he played as great a part in the affairs of his country as the French lowbrows. The popular prejudice against the highbrow in public life does not seem well founded.

The Question Box

Q. Can materials be bleached in the sunlight more rapidly in cold than in warm weather? W. H. R.
A. Bleaching in sunlight is generally explained as being due to oxidation, which is hastened by the photochemical rays. The Bureau of Standards has not noticed that bleaching is more rapid in cold weather. If so, it may be due to the greater clearness of the air so that fewer rays of short wave length are reflected

QUEER QUIRKS OF NATURE

BY ARTHUR N. PAER
President, American Nature Ass'n
It is spring, and Bob White is calling from a fence post beside the road. It is a cheery call, and base indeed would be the man who would harm

Bob White

Bob as he sends forth his challenge. For the blithe call serve a double purpose; it tells Mrs. Bob that here he is on the job, and it proclaims to other Bobs, in no uncertain terms, that this is his domain, and that he will resent with all his might their intrusion.

Some suppose that this loud call is Bob White's only method of voicing his emotions, but this is far from the truth. Let his brown-throated sweet-heart wander near his perch and he drops down into the thicket and with the softest and most persuasive calls pursues his wooing.

The gentleness and beauty of Bob White has led to attempts in some states to have him put on the list of song birds, that he might be protected at all times of the year. Though there is much virtue in this view, it has not found wide acceptance, for a man dearly loves to track Bob and his brood.

This sport has long ago resulted in his extirpation from many parts of his range, especially where the climatic conditions were so severe that he had all he could do to maintain his race when unpersecuted.

What a tragedy for poor Bob, for those of us who love him alive, and for our children who may never know his cheerful challenge!

See-Sawing On Broadway
By Gilbert Swan

New York—The coffee shops of Manhattan's "Little Rumania" buzz with chatter now that Queen Marie is to come from the homeland.

In the second-story halls along the byways of the East Side the choruses may be heard, practicing the folk songs they will sing to her.

And if, perchance, the queen ventures over to their colony, she will find much to remind her of home.

True, the outward appearance of "Little Rumania" is largely American, but inside all is different—Rumanian food, songs, gossip, books, celebrities.

"Little Rumania" centers on Second avenue, just where the Russian and Hungarian districts break off at Houston street. Its shop windows are full of colorful and gaudy wares, much I am told, as are the streets of Bucharest.

And, again, like Bucharest, few of the shop keepers are Rumanian. They are Greeks, Hungarians and Germans. Jewels glister in the windows, fancy evening dresses are displayed, the colors are loud, but attractive.

The pastry shops serve rich dainties, the coffee houses are crowded, and down Houston street a maestro of the cymbal plays, and is sometimes heard above the clatter of plates and the babble of voices.

Just around the corner is a Carnegie library with one of the finest collections of Rumanian books.

And in Broome street is a cluster of cafes where chefs pride themselves on their menus and where go folk of all races who prefer quiet and sultry to the din and rattle that accompanies eating in most New York dining places.

The homes of the Rumanians, I am told, are models of comfort and luxury. Their culture ranks highest among the colonies and their rejection of Americanisms is, I presume, due to the blatant and cheap.

This culture finds an outlet in several clubs which have far greater distinction than one would imagine from a casual glance at their exteriors.

The love for the homeland is quite as noticeable as that of any visiting Californian. Yet thousands of the residents are Jews, who fled political persecution. No race in America keeps in closer touch with home politics, and the coffee shops perpetually echo with chatter on political going on in the Balkans. They follow closely the literature, music and art of Rumania, giving little heed to that of their adopted land. They have produced some of the most eminent teachers of the American universities and many of the finest musicians.

They have their own burying ground and their poor are taken care of by a communal charity.

Queen Marie will have no reason to blush for her children in America. They're quite as distinctive as the queen herself, if you please!

The straw is hurled through the air at an enormous velocity and expands its energy in going through the wood. This happens so quickly that the inertia of the straw keeps it from crumpling up before piercing.

Q. Was "The Midshipman" the first motion picture taken at Annapolis, aside from news pictures? E. E.

A. At the time of its production such a statement was made.

Q. What is the correct temperature for a hot bath? C. E.

A. A hot bath may be from 100 to 112 degrees Fahrenheit. A cold bath should be between 35 and 60 degrees.

Q. What is Gorgonzola cheese? O. P.

A. Gorgonzola is called the "aristocrat of Italian cheeses." It is very widely used and is somewhat similar to Roquefort, but not so expensive. Like Roquefort it is made of sheep's milk, but is milder in flavor. Gorgonzola is put up in twenty-pound baskets, one cheese to a basket. The outside of this cheese is covered with a preparation made chiefly from gypsum and tallow. In this way it is possible to keep the cheese a year or more. A great deal of this cheese comes from the province of Lombardy.

Q. Do flies ever serve any useful purpose? M. O. S.

A. A new kind of fly was recently sent to the Smithsonian Institution for identification. This fly has been discovered to be very effective in attacking a species of caterpillar which destroys coconut palms in the Federated Malay States. It appeared to be an entirely new variety and has been christened "Physcomyia remota."

CLASS IN PUBLIC SPEAKING TO MEET FIRST TIME FRIDAY

Still Room for Few More Students in Course, Director Reports

The first meeting of a class in Public Speaking will be held Friday evening at Appleton Vocational school. At present there are seven applications for this class, and there is still room for two or three more, according to Herb Hellig, director.

The purpose of the class, which is both for beginning and advanced students, is to cover the fundamentals of practical nature in public speaking. Conversational and public addresses will be studied with the aid of the text book, "Essentials of Effective Speaking," which was written by Prof. F. W. Orr, former teacher of public speaking at Lawrence college. Mr. Orr now is head of the department of public speaking of Washington college, Seattle, Wash. This book is published by the Meyer Press of this city.

Norman E. Knutzen, a senior at Lawrence college, will teach the class. Mr. Knutzen has taught for three and one-half years at Stevens Point Normal school. He has spent two summers at the University of Wisconsin, and is finishing the work to get his degree at the college here.

WRISTON WILL SPEAK AT ALUMNI BANQUET

A. P. Anderson, alumni secretary and Dr. Henry M. Wriston, president, will speak at the annual alumni banquet of Lawrence college at the Milwaukee athletic club Nov. 4. About 500 reservations are expected for the affair, it was said. The dinner will be held at the time of the convention of the Wisconsin Teachers association in Milwaukee.

William Doll of the class of 1920, has been appointed chairman of arrangements and Chris Isley of the class of 1912, toastmaster.

Lordly Mallard Abounds Along Wolf River Bottoms

BY B. A. CLAFLIN

The competition nowadays for a share of our wild game is so keen that one not only must know how to hunt but, also where to go to find more game and less hunters if even moderate success is to be attained. In former years good Mallard and Teal shooting could be had in the marshes around our larger bodies of water during the early part of the season which at that time, opened on Aug. 20, and later on, Sept. 1. There were plenty of birds, and the few hunters who sought them knew how to hunt.

It is different nowadays. The so-called hunters are not after ducks—that is too difficult a proposition for them. The foolish mudhen is their meat. From long before the legal hour for shooting they begin the bombardment of this easily shot, and very inferior bird. And, apparently, no effort is put forth to restrain them in their violations. This illegal shooting is being done day after day and is kept up until the last defenseless hen is shot, or until the season advances and the cold, inclement weather makes it too much of a hardship for these nimrods. At the rate these easily shot birds are being killed off it will be but a short time when they will have become extinct.

Before the advent of this class of noisy nimrod, the shallow feeding Mallard and Teal frequented the marshes in great numbers, for their natural foods are mostly to be found therein. Now, however, necessity forces them to remain outside in the deeper water during the daytime and, for that reason, the ducks will be with us long after the mudhen has passed into history. Then, perhaps, we shall again have a return of this incomparable sport, for the present army of hen shooters who find duck shooting far beyond their ability will quit the game in disgust.

For those of us who appreciate the difference between duck shooting and mudhen potting, it has long since become necessary to seek other fields than our too well known big water marshes if we want the early birds. There are plenty of these places to be found if one but knows where to look.

As we have maintained before, one of the most prolific regions for the lordly Mallard lies along the Wolf river bottoms. From where it enters Lake Poygan, for miles northward extend vast tracts of marshes that contain wild rice, wild potato plant, celery and the many other forms of vegetable matter which constitute their natural foods. Many of these places are not easily accessible and, for that reason, seldom hunted.

Recently we visited what is locally known as the Black Slough. This fine Mallard resort lies between New London and Shiocton in the Wolf river bottoms. It is an ideal spot for these fine birds, and it is not an uncommon sight to see them in flocks of fifty or more swooping down over the tree tops into some convenient hole for their night's feeding.

All along up the river from this point there are other places where, if one is acquainted, it is possible to find plenty of birds. The natives never resort to decoys. They simply wade about through the marshes shooting at the birds as they flush from the potholes. To them it was quite an innovation when they observed how easily we bagged our limit of Mallards as they sailed into or decoys.

BAD WEATHER ENDS WORK ON HIGHWAYS

No Further Attempts at Road Construction Are Expected This Year

Probably no further attempts will be made to do any road construction work in the county this season, it was announced by Highway Commissioner A. C. Brusewitz on Tuesday.

Weather conditions have virtually halted all work and spreading gravel is not feasible where the ground is so wet that the gravel works under the dirt and simply makes roads worse where any attempt at surfacing is undertaken, the commissioner said.

The only fortunate circumstances encountered so far this year in road building is the fact that laying of cement and some macadam surfacing was completed, the commissioner declared.

"Where road surface is fairly good now it will be left so rather than try grading and graveling before winter," Mr. Brusewitz said.

COUNTY MAY KEEP ROADS OPEN FOR USE THIS WINTER

Inventory Shows No Heavy Purchases of Machinery Would Have to Be Made

The dream of merchants and motorists to keep state trunk highway 15 open for winter travel stands a better chance of coming true this winter than at any previous time, it was reported Tuesday.

Heretofore the county has only stood for the expense of keeping the road open between county buildings but indications are that enough pressure can be brought by business interests to convince the county board of supervisors of the economic value of keeping the main trunk highway in condition for winter travel.

A casual inventory of county owned machinery reveals that enough equipment is owned so that no heavy purchases would be required, it was stated.

"The only difficulty," A. G. Brusewitz, county highway commissioner pointed out, "is in getting a sufficient appropriation to allow employment of men for the work during heavy snow periods."

PHONE FIRMS ADOPT "THANK YOU" SYSTEM

The "Thank You" rule adopted by the local exchange of the Wisconsin Telephone company has proven so successful that it has been adopted in nearly every exchange in the Appleton district, and other districts have been authorized to adopt the system, according to F. N. Belanger, acting manager.

It was tried in Appleton, Fond du Lac and Oshkosh about two months ago as an experiment, and proved so successful in these cities that officials decided to make the rule statewide. Last week the change was made by nearly all of the exchanges in this district, except a few smaller offices, and the latter will make the change this week. Other districts are expected to follow soon.

The new rule reduces the number of errors from 10 to 35 per cent in various offices and creates a friendlier feeling between the operator and the patron, it is reported.

ALL BUBBLERS DO NOT HARBOR GERMS

Type Without Mouthpiece Is Safe, City Health Authorities State

Danger of contracting a contagious disease from bubblers is present only in those which emit the water in a vertical direction, city health authorities maintain. All other types are safer to a greater or less degree, depending of course upon the angle at which water is ejected.

The reason is apparent. In the former type, water which has touched a drinker's mouth often falls back against the spout and is drawn into it when the pressure is released. Dirt likewise falls on the spout and seeps into the water pipe. Growth of bacteria is consequently encouraged, and persons who stop to drink are exposed to the germs which are carried out

GRADE SHOULDERS ON STATE HIGHWAY 47

Road patrolmen on Highway 47 have been busy during the last two days grading shoulders and placing of the bubble in the water. The same holds true for continuously running bubblers, although the chance for bacteria development probably is not quite as great.

The safe bubbler is the one which ejects water from one side at an angle of approximately 45 degrees, it is said. No mouthpiece is present and the water does not fall straight back to the place from where it issued.

This is the type of bubbler which has been installed in the city, with only two exceptions. The old type with the mouthpiece is located at Walnut-st. and College-ave, and Appleton-st. and W. College-ave, and it is probable that these will be replaced soon, it is reported. When this is done, no fear need be entertained of contracting diseases from bubblers, it is pointed out.

Walls Of Room Determine Style Of Furnishing Proper Treatment Of Walls Is Fundamental

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of articles on home decoration written by James Blauvelt, probably the best known of New York specialists.

BY JAMES BLAUVELT

It will be no hardship to spend the winter evenings within your own four walls, if those walls are so treated as to make a charming background for the furnishings of your home, and to add an interest of their own to the general effect.

The walls have a decisive influence upon the mood of a room, and partially determine its style of furnishing.

For example, if you are lucky enough to have a room paneled in wood, you must consider the type of the paneling. If it is in small, square divisions, the room is distinctly seventeenth century and Jacobean furniture should predominate.

Eighteenth century rooms have larger, oblong panels and demand marble mantels and Georgian furnishings.

UTILIZING LIGHT

However, wood-paneled walls are expensive and therefore rarely found save in very fine houses and apartment buildings. The painted, plastered and papered walls used in most American homes are no less charming when skillfully handled.

You will of course remember, in decorating your house, that north rooms require wall tones of yellow or rose or mulberry or tan to counteract the cold north light.

The cooler shades of blue and green are properly used in a room that abounds in sunlight.

Plaster walls give satisfying backgrounds when painted in a solid color and accepted with wood moldings, in a deeper tone.

The question of ceilings can be solved by considering the height of the walls. If they are very lofty, use a lighter tint of the color used on the walls, or a warm buff, to decrease the height and make the room more intimate and interesting.

White ceilings are useful to increase the height of the walls.

If you intend to paper your walls, you have a still wider choice of delightful backgrounds. The papers now being made show a marked improvement in design over those of a few years ago.

A few main principles must be kept in mind when you select any wall paper. First, vertical stripes give height to the walls. Second, large, bold patterns decrease the size of the room and are liable to grow monotonous sooner than the quieter patterns.

Most popular, and most practical for the English or early American house are the chintz patterns, designed after chintz fabric patterns.

LIKE OIL PAINTINGS

The use of paper panels against a plaster wall is illustrated in the room pictured. They give almost the effect of oil paintings, without approaching the latter in costliness.

These panels are often varnished and shelacked when a soft, antique effect is desired, but many persons prefer them in their natural finish.

Strikingly beautiful effects may be achieved with the scenic papers, which are purchased in sets to form a complete panorama when framed on the wall.

These scenic papers are placed above a chair rail, so that the eye is on a level with their scenes, and they are protected from the rubbing of chair backs.

TAPESTRIES COSTLY

Chinese, French and early American designs are most favored in the scenic papers. There are also elaborate classic motifs, like that of Cupid and Psyche, for spacious, formal rooms.

Tapestries and damasks are effective wall coverings for elaborate houses. But their costliness and the problems of sanitation they present prohibit them for general use. They are used chiefly for large, Georgian or French apartments.

When you have prepared your walls as backgrounds for your rooms, you have laid the foundations for a consistent scheme of decoration.

PANELS OF WALL PAPER ON A PLASTER WALL GIVE THE EFFECT OF OIL PAINTINGS, AS ILLUSTRATED IN THIS INTERIOR BY W. AND J. SLOANE.

BLACK HAIR WILL BE VOGUE

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

GERMAN men prefer blacks, or at least they will during the coming social season, according to five leading Berlin tonsorial artists. They find that three-fourths of their women customers who hitherto had their hair dyed blond, now demand black.

PATCH WORK RETURNS

The animated patch-work quilt out of grandmother's bedroom has made its reappearance, this time on Paris streets. The lavish use of embroidery for day-time clothes and three or four different colors and fabrics in one single frock are responsible.

Embroidery has invaded not only the pockets and necklines of frocks but covers a wide area of the gown or skirt, or both.

One winter coat in three colors, taupe, grey and black, embroidered in silk and wool, silver and gold, gives an idea of the color scheme now prevailing for autumn and winter wear.

NEW STYLE WOMEN'S PHOTOS

The Eton crop has started a new style in English feminine photography. It has been discovered that the natural curve of the body, not usually obtainable with long hair, appears at its best with a close shaven head and bare arms, shoulders and back. The pose of the head adorned with an Eton crop, shows off the nape of the neck, which in turn shows off the shoulders and arms and continues an harmonious line to the waist.

DRESS SUITS FOR WOMEN

As designed for women, the new fall dress suit is made of moire and crepe de chine. The skirt front and collar of jade green georgette. Though ultra-modern, the woman's dress suit is suggestive of picturesque bygone days. The skirt is slit up the center to reveal satin knee breeches when the wearer sits down. When the wearer stands upright, the suit would resemble a slim-fitting frock were it not for the coat tails.

EVENING FROCKS VARIED

Evening frocks are so varied this autumn that it is difficult to classify them. The main distinction made by Bond Street is one of silhouette. There is the frock that hangs straight, except when the wearer moves, and there is the definite picture gown. The straight frocks are often draped, either to one side or to the middle of the figure, the gathered "olds" hanging a few inches below the rest of the hem, while the slim skirt is slashed to disclose a finely pleated underlip. These frocks are of knee length, and the picture frocks as long or as short as the wearer pleases.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

LET'S stop our loafing," Scouty said. "We play, but ought to look instead for some place where we can hide, in case it starts to rain. I'll take the lead, and maybe run. We'll all look first, then have our fun." So all the others followed him a winding lane.

They trudged along an hour or more, not knowing just what was in store, and came upon a forest where the growth was very thick. Then Carpy cried, "What can we do? I'm sure we never can get through." And Scouty laughed. "Just follow me. I'll show you all a trick."

He scrambled up a near-by tree, and so did all the others. Gee, you'd never think these little folk could climb and rape such No. "I really can't see any sense," said Scouty, "when the woods so dense, for us to try and travel through. Let's crawl on top instead."

They all were very much in trim, and hopped along, from limb to limb. The fun there was in doing this, they surely ought to know. They traveled for an hour and then came to an open space again. "All right," said Scouty, "follow me. We'll all climb down below."

And when they'd settled on the ground, I'll bet you can't guess what they found. "Oh, here's a cave, a dandy cave," excited Scouty cried. Then all the others rushed right past, and Scouty warned them. "Not so fast. You'd better wait a minute till we find out what's inside."

"Aw, gee, what are you scared about?" said Coppy. "I will soon find out. The rest of you wait here so I will have no lives to save." So in he went, and out he came, and really it seemed quite a shame, for Coppy chased a frightened little rabbit from the cave.

"I still think, Judy, that you should keep your appointment with me to-night and commence your duties tomorrow. I give you fair warning that if you don't go, I'll ask Susan Kirtley, and she is very beautiful and I once thought I loved her. I might think so again."

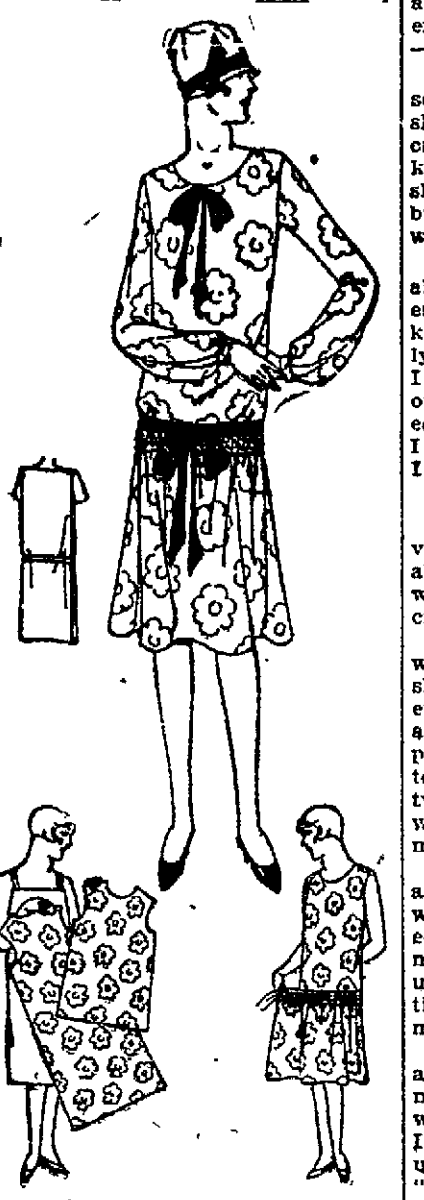

"Is that a threat or a promise, Jerry? Whichever it is, I'll take it as part of the game." I hung up disbeliever.

"I really don't know why I am calling up Jerry till the time," I reminded myself, "unless it is to keep him dangling, as he says. I am getting to be an old dog in the manger." For all the time I was talking to Jerry I was thinking of John Meredith, thinking of those sad eyes and that sneering mouth and wondering how it would look if for once someone could make him permanently un-look it and plant upon it a smile that would not come off.

I had had one glimpse of his face when he was smiling and the change was so wonderful, I could hardly believe it.

As I was about to pass out of my room into the hall, I heard Mr. Symington speaking. As I told you Jack, I got the tickets. This is some little jambores you are planning. Are you strong enough to stand the curious

BOILING VEGETABLES

Experts say it is advisable to cut vegetables lengthwise instead of crosswise when preparing them for boiling, or even for salads, if you want to retain their best flavor.

USE MEAT STOCK

Creamed or scalloped vegetables may be prepared with evaporated milk diluted with meat stock if the supply of cream or milk is limited.

PLENTY OF WATER

When cooking vegetables with a strong flavor, such as cabbage, cauliflower, Brussels sprouts or turnips, always put them in an open kettle and cover with an abundance of water.

STUFFED PEPPERS

Two or three large sweet red peppers 1-2 pound fresh mushrooms, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 cup cooked rice, 1-4 cup cream, 4 tablespoons dried bread crumbs, salt and pepper.

Cut peppers in halves lengthwise and remove seeds and white pith. Drop into boiling water and parboil for five minutes. Moisten rice with cream and add mushrooms and butter. Fill peppers with mixture and place in a well buttered shallow pan. Cover with crumbs, dot with bits of butter and bake in a hot oven until brown.

These peppers are particularly good with a planked steak or fish. (Copyright, 1926, NEA Service, Inc.)

BACK AGAIN

After hearing his friend thus place this fear subtly in his mind, I thought it was about time to make my appearance on the scene.

"Ah!" I said, stepping into the hall. "I am glad we are going to the Beaux Arts, my dear Mr. Meredith, for it was there that I suffered the greatest humiliation in my life. At that time, I thought I would never go there again and up until now, I never have. But tonight, however you have unconsciously arranged it so that I shall re-enter in triumph."

John Meredith's face lighted up. I saw again the smile that I was always trying to call up and my heart went thumping again.

"He hastened to say, 'I am very glad my dear Judy (you'll let me call you Judy as Joan does, won't you?) if I can make you happy in the slightest degree. I never believed before that I could make anyone happy and to make you joyous is something that will make me perhaps happier than anything I have ever done in this world.'"

"You see, I am usually a killjoy to everyone. I even hurt my beautiful mother, by insisting upon staying alive when I should have died at birth."

At this moment, very ostentatiously, Mr. Symington left the room.

BLUEBLOOD AUTHOR FAILS BUT TRIES AGAIN

BY HORTENSE SAUNDERS

New York—Temperamental and active women need to have lots of work to do, and if their home and family doesn't use up all their excess energy—and usually it doesn't—they should have jobs of some kind.

So says Isabel Cotton Smith, herself one of the restless class. Though she belongs to one of the old, aristocratic families of New York, and knows the 400 by their first names, she knows her way around in the business world. She's in Dun's as well as the Social Register.

"As a child," she recalls, "I was always unhappy because I never had enough to do. I couldn't possibly keep myself occupied, and I frequently got into trouble. As I grew older, I was unable to take social life seriously, and it was not until I needed the money, and went to work that I really became happy because then I had an outlet for my activities."

WAS FIRED TWICE

Mrs. Smith has made a great adventure of her business career and allowed no conventional notions of what a first family lady cannot do to cramp her activity.

"My first venture was that of saleswoman in an exclusive New York shop. At the end of two weeks my employer asked me not to return, and as a final gesture, he said I was impossible—I believe he went so far as to imply I was an idiot. I stayed two months in my next job but it was not a period of unalloyed joy for me or the firm.

"So I went into business. I rented a house in Washington, got in touch with a seamstress I know, and opened my own dressmaking establishment—managed it for seven years, until I left Washington, and by that time, being a business woman was in my blood.

"So when we moved down to Texas during the war, where there was nothing for me to do, I started to write a cook book. Believe it or not, I was nine years writing that volume which has recently come out as 'The Blue Book of Cookery.'"

"All my love for cooking went into it. During that time, I experimented with some two thousand recipes besides what came up in the regular course of the day's eating routine. And I never again want to see eggs and a mixing bowl looking menacingly at me."

When she returned to New York, after the war, Mrs. Smith plunged into new business activities. She became a professional marketer, and the business, she admits, was a flop. Buying vegetables and meats for a hundred women was just a hundred times as bad as buying for one.

From that she operated an employment bureau, then she went into real estate on a large scale and is one of the most successful women in the business.

"I didn't go into business for fun," she admits. "If I hadn't needed a little money to keep the gas from being turned off, I don't suppose I should have made quite the effort I did, at the start."

SHE PREFERS WORK

I've made the most ridiculous mistakes, and tried the most outlandish schemes. Having had no business training of any kind, no disciplinary college course, or no capital, some of the time, I've not been able to see the road very plainly—but after various digressions in the fields and highways, I have been able to lim back to it.

"Society! Well, ambition and money will always create what we call society. Today many of the old families are the new poor. Who can tell who will be in power tomorrow—but business goes on, and the business woman, who has a job she likes and that brings in the income she needs—well, she should worry about society."

BLUE AND WHITE

Valencia blue is a very flattering color for the woman with blue eyes and a clear skin—who is premature-ly white haired.

VIOLETTE SLEEVE

The new Vionette sleeve that is deep at the armhole and very narrow at the wrist is particularly effective in the black satin or black velvet gown.

ROSE AND GOLD

A very lovely evening frock is made of rose crepe over a slip of cloth of gold, the upper tunic being slit to reveal the golden lining.

TIERED SKIRT HERE

The bloused back and uneven hemline are firmly entrenched in the mode. So is the tiered skirt.

TAILORED SKIRTS

An odd note in the winter styles is the use of strictly tailored belts of gold or silver leather on chiffon evening gowns.

BLACK WOOL SMART

The black wool coat banded and collared with nutria, or beaver is very smart—black and brown is a smart combination in color as well.

FLASH OF COLOR

Chiffon neckerchiefs in printed, chiffon give a touch of loveliness to the sombre frock.

Find Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Dependable Medicine

LOUISE LOUTHAN
ROUTE 2, CHARLESTON, ILLINOIS

From the days of the polio to the days of the radio, mothers have given this dependable medicine to their daughters. School girls are often careless. They get wet feet. They overstudy or they tire themselves with too many dances and parties. They get run down.

Many an active girl of today, like the demure maiden of the 1870's, has found that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is helping her to find better health and energy.

"I gave my fifteen-year-old girl

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it did her a wonderful lot of good. She had been out of school for four months. I read the advertisements of the Vegetable Compound, and since she has taken it she has improved and has gone back to school again. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to other mothers with girls who are not as strong as they should be."—Mrs. ALICE LOUTHAN, Route 2, Charleston, Illinois.

"My daughter was out of school two terms. I have known about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound all my life and finally decided that she should try it. Three bottles helped her in various ways for the next couple of years."—Mrs. W. E. GILBERT, 586 E. 52nd Place, Los Angeles, Calif.

"I have always been sickly, and until I was fourteen my father was very strict about my perfect attendance at grammar school. I have gone to school through hard storms; and often taken cold. When I was fourteen I took to my bed and did not get up for eighteen months. Everyone thought I could not live. Just four months ago I began taking your wonderful medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I could notice a great change almost at once. Now I feel like a new person. I wish all girls would try Lydia E. Pinkham's wonderful medicine."—Mrs. C. M. 16 Members Taken In By Pro Women

Sixteen new members were voted into Appleton Business and Professional Women's club at the regular meeting Tuesday evening in Appleton. Reservations are being made for about ten members who will attend state night rally of the Milwaukee Business and Professional Women's club in Milwaukee on Oct. 25. The list will be complete Wednesday evening. The trip will be made by train Tuesday morning with return Wednesday evening.

A program of stunts followed the talk of the evening which was made by Muriel Kelly, who outlined the magazine reading of business women. The speaker said that most women read what they always have read, largely from the group magazines which center about the home. She gave several groups of magazines which keep pace with the broader scope of women's interest outside the domestic circle. Although most of her talk was about the advantageous magazines available, Miss Kelly scored the "paper pulp" magazines which are sold by the thousands from the newsstands each month by calling attention to the fact that most writers do not sign their own names to their stories and articles, but use assumed names. Miss Kelly said that business women can scarcely get any benefit from reading the stuff of which the authors themselves are ashamed.

Prof. O. P. Fairfield of the Art department of Lawrence college will be the next speaker. He will talk on Nov. 16 on Art in Everyday Life. The program for the year is about completed and will include Personality in Business by Mrs. Z. McClure of the T. M. E. R. L., Milwaukee; Miss Lydia Hollenbeck, A Travelogue on Alaska; a vocational guidance meeting; Henry Tuttrup, Banking Principles; and election of officers at the May meeting.

KAUKAUNA-LITTLE CHUTE-KIMBERLY

NEARBY
TOWNSASK WAIVERS FROM PROPERTY OWNERS
FOR STORM SEWERSCouncil Allows Sewer Construction Company Payment on Contract

Kaukauna—The John Schlice Sewer Construction company of Sturgeon Bay was allowed $1,771.17 on its contract for the construction of sewers on the north side, which have been completed, at the regular meeting of the city council Tuesday evening in the municipal building.

A discussion of the advisability of putting in a sewer on Jefferson-st. between Draper-st. and Wisconsin-ave. was held. Frank Charlesworth, Jr., city engineer, said that the sewer to be built on that street would have to be one of two types, either a storm sewer or a sanitary sewer, and that if a sanitary sewer is installed the city would have to install pumping machinery to pump the sewage to the Wisconsin-ave. line. This he said would be quite expensive. City Attorney Joseph Lefevre said that a storm sewer could not be constructed and charged to the individual property owners, as is the custom for the other type of sewer, unless a waiver was circulated and all the owners signed it. The council decided to circulate the waiver and get the signatures. The construction of the sewer was referred to the committee on sewers.

A resolution was adopted making the first and the sixteenth of the month regular pay days for all city employees. Heretofore, city employees have not had a regular pay day in each month.

Alderman Phillips asked the council to buy enough property adjoining Cleveland-ave. in the Fifth ward to make it a full width street.

At present the street as it runs from Dodge-st. to Tenth-st. is only half the width of the average road in the city and it is impossible for automobiles and other vehicles to turn around on the road. People in this neighborhood also are complaining about the poor city water they get for drinking purposes because there are dead ends on Dodge-st., Ninth-st. and Tenth-st. J. O. Posson of the city water department said that he would hook up all the dead ends if the city bought the other half of Cleveland-ave. so that he can run the pipe on that street. The council referred the matter again to Mr. Posson and the board of public works.

Alderman Cooper, president of the council, took the mayor's chair in the absence of Mayor W. C. Sullivan.

KAUKAUNA MERCHANTS
CAUGHT BY FORGER

Kaukauna—A check forger has been operating in this city again. Early in the week a check amounting to more than $35 was presented at the A. M. Judae store on Depot-st. and was accepted. The purchase made was small and as a result the store is out quite a sum of money for the check was protested and it came back. It was drawn on an Appleton bank by a supposed proprietor of a creamery in the town of Harrison. It is understood the same man has been working in Sherwood and Appleton.

ORGANIZE Y. M. C. A.
FOR MEMBER DRIVESeek Between Three and Four Hundred Members in Campaign

Kaukauna—Committees for the Kaukauna Railroad Y. M. C. A. membership campaign are being arranged by P. R. Maginnis, secretary of the local "Y" and will be organized for the opening of the campaign on Monday, Oct. 25. The campaign will continue until Sunday, Nov. 1. Between three and four hundred members are expected to join the local Y. M. C. A. This campaign will be part of a national campaign for railroad Y. M. C. A.'s throughout the country to increase their membership.

In speaking of the campaign, W. R. Cole, president of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad said, "I have learned with interest of the approaching membership campaign of the Railroad Y. M. C. A. on this road. The importance of the Y. M. C. A. in the religious and social life of every community, has become so fully established that argument in its behalf seems superfluous. The American people are not in the habit of pre-empting non-essential institutions or those that do not fully prove their worth. The tremendous growth of the Y. M. C. A. in the United States since its foundation is ample evidence of the fundamental and important service it performs for the community."

COLD

Colds can be ended in a day. They can be prevented by taking the right help at the start. Millions of people have proved that.

The way is HILL'S—a prescription which combines for modern discoveries. It is quick, efficient and complete. It stops the cold, checks the fever, opens the bowels and tones the entire system. It is such an ideal method that we paid $1,000,000 for it.

Colds rarely develop if HILL'S is on hand to check them at the start. They stop quickly when HILL'S is taken later. Find this out and you will never use a lesser help for colds.

CHIROPRACTIC FOR Working People

If there is one thing which is imperative for the working man and working woman to possess, it is health. It matters not how good a job you have, you are forced to occasionally "lay off" because of sickness.

You may not be sick enough to be confined to bed. You may even be able to your work after a fashion, but you are by no means well.

You take little interest in your work. You are sometimes hardly able to drag one foot after the other. Already your co-workers are wondering how long you will last. Sooner or later you will be told your day of usefulness has ended, and you will be forced to seek a new job. You have lost your health. It is therefore your duty to yourself and family to conserve your health so that you will not be relegated to the "scrap heap." What will do it? Not poisoning your system with drugs. Not mutilating your body with the surgeon's knife.

Chiropractic adjustments will make you healthy and keep you healthy. The Chiropractor locates the cause of your trouble and adjusts the same.

The cause will invariably be found in nerve pressure which, in its turn, it caused by subluxated (displaced) vertebrae small bones of the spine. Directly this nerve pressure is relieved, the vital force will flow on unimpeded from the brain to the various organs, and you will possess that which you seek—health.

DEVELOP MENTAL AND SOCIAL SIDE TOGETHER, PLEASE

Teachers Urged to Advance Students Along Uniform Lines

More effort is being made in rural school work this year to keep a balance established between the mental and social side of the students in attempting to bring forth mental products at the expense of corresponding age development, it was announced Monday.

Supervising teachers are especially instructing new teachers to supply background for their advanced pupils by suggesting interesting reading and historical work rather than to concentrate in bringing the classes up to a point beyond their normal progress in strictly academic work associated with the standard curriculum, it was said.

Many children, it was pointed out, are mentally capable of apparently absorbing the routine of school work far in advance of an age balance, yet, this same pupil, it was pointed out, may be deficient in the normal social experiences to parallel that degree of education. It is against allowing this condition to prevail, even in extreme cases, that is being advised against.

Where a child is easily able to assimilate knowledge faster than his or her class good outside reading will do much toward filling in the craving for additional knowledge. Yet the child will be held to acquiring an evenly balanced education commensurate with its physical age, it was declared.

Visits of supervising teachers so far have been concentrated on giving assistance to teachers new to the county system but it is expected that this year will see this accomplished and that starting next week an itinerary will be outlined where routine work and conferences will prevail.

Reports from the rural districts on examinations given for the first six weeks school period were expected to arrive at the office of County Superintendent A. G. Meating on Monday. Examinations were given in all rural schools on Oct. 13 and 14.

ROSA PLEADS FOR FARM PROTECTION

Agriculture Can't Survive Unless It Is Helped, Candidate Says

Darlington—Unless the farmers of Wisconsin and the rest of the United States are given such protection as will place agriculture on an equal basis with other industry, many of them will be unable to survive an impending financial crisis, Judge Charles J. Rosa, independent candidate for United States senator, declared here Tuesday night in a campaign speech.

"Barricades and over-night remedies advanced by countless politicians have done nothing to relieve the distressed farmers of this country," Judge Rosa declared. "What the farmer needs is a remedy that will remove from farming the handicap of buying in a protected market and selling in a world market."

Taxation of farmers in Wisconsin during the regime of Gov. J. Blaine as increased to the point where it is unbearable, the judge told his audience, pointing out that rural values in Wisconsin have steadily decreased for several years while the value of urban property has consistently risen.

"Despite this fact," he declared, the farmer's tax burden continually grows heavier. In 1924 37,000 Wisconsin farmers, representing the best 10 per cent of the state's agricultural population, averaged a net income of $79 each, representing return for use of the farm and pay for the work of the farmer and his family. What, then, was the deplorable condition of the other 80 per cent?"

ROKAW RESIDENTS ELECT OFFICERS

The council will take care of dormitory regulations and will have charge of a social program for the on in the hall.

CUT DOWN HILLSIDE NORTH OF HIGHWAY 15

A large steam shovel was put into operation this week to cut ground from the hillside north of Highway 15 at the foot of the Little Chute hill. The dirt is loaded into trucks and dumped into the hollow at the south side of the road to fill in for the new roadway leading to the recently constructed bridge. The new bridge and roadway will eliminate the dangerous curve at the foot of the hill.

Enough ground will be removed from the hillside to materially decrease the barrier in vision this hillside of the road to the north from the side road joining the highway at this point. It is expected that filling in will take about a week or ten days and as soon as the ground has settled the concrete work the roadway will be laid. The new road and bridge will be opened to traffic before Jan. 1, 1927, it is expected.

Greunke Brothers Construction company of Appleton is in charge of the work, which was started about six weeks ago.

EARLY SPECIALIZATION HINDRANCE TO CULTURE

Early specialization is a hindrance to a broad cultural education, Prof. J. C. Lymer of Lawrence college said in a talk to the student body at chapel services Monday morning. "Lay your broad and thorough foundation based on fundamental and standardized courses" during the first years of college, he said, and then "make yourself master of some one thing."

Prof. Lymer maintained that there is a commercial value in culture, and the person with imagination and ideas will financially benefit from them. When the principles of the larger fields have been studied, it is then time to specialize, the speaker continued.

STAGE AND SCREEN GRIPPING SITUATIONS IN MIX POLICE STORY

Tom Mix, star of the Fox Films production "My Own Pal" has ample opportunity to display his daring horsemanship and his skill with the rope in this altogether different western. This thrilling film comes to the New Bijou Thursday for three days. In it, he is Tom O'Hara who comes to the city in search of thrills and joins the mounted police. In this character Tom puts Tony his horse through all his tricks for the benefit of his fellow police officers and shows how handy a rope can come in when crooks are to be apprehended and tied fast until further notice.

But, he does not use his rope exclusively for the capture of thieves—he gains his way into the force because he has saved the niece of the chief from being injured in a runaway accident.

Vivacious little Olive Bordeh was selected to play opposite Mr. Mix in this production. Little Virginia Marshall is cast as his pal Jill. Others in the cast are Tom Sanchel, Tom McGuire, Bardson Bard, Jacques Rollens and Helen Lynch.

"HOLD THAT LION" OPENS AT FISCHER'S APPLETON SAT. What is a cat not a cat? Answer: When it's a lion! Because he doesn't know that in the language of big game hunters, a "cat" means a lion, Douglas MacLean becomes involved in a lion hunting expedition in the course of his thrilling and hilarious adventures in his latest comedy, "Hold That Lion."

This will be the feature picture at the Fischer's Appleton next Saturday and Sunday. Film fans who feel the need of a strong laugh tonic, will find this MacLean vehicle the right kind of strong medicine. Watching the smiling funmaker trying to act romantic while minus his trousers, or attending a fashionable dance in a pair of stolen Scotch kilts, or getting familiar with half dozen hungry lions, is a sure cure for all aches and pains.

The above are a just a few of the many gags and laugh moments in this smile-a-minute comedy, which begins in a New York sky-scraper and ends in an African jungle. Between these two scenic extremes, MacLean chases a beautiful blonde with whom he has fallen in love at first sight. It would be unfair to relate now he proves himself a hero as a big game hunter, despite his craven fear. Suffice to say that even the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals would indorse his humane and humorous method of capturing a ferocious lion.

William Beaudine, who made such an excellent directorial job of "That's My Baby," wielded the megaphone on this one as well. Rosalie Mulhall wrote the original screen story and Joseph Franklin Poland attended to the adaptation. Constance Howard supports the star.

"THE BOY FRIEND" The well-known book of etiquette is coming in for a lot of good-natured kidding by Monta Bell in his production, "The Boy Friend," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture playing at the Elite Theatre Thursday and Friday.

"The Boy Friend" is a delightful story of small-town life. Ida May, the heroine of the story, is enamored of New York and insists upon leaving home for the big city. As a last resort her "boy friend" and her parents get together, and with the aid of an etiquette book, which tells them how to be "charming," give a French party in her honor, hoping to prove to her that small town people can be just as elegant as New Yorkers.

The conception of a French party which the three form, is deliciously funny. They first startle the natives of the village by announcing that the party will commence at 10 P. M. and then shock them by their efforts to be charming.

Marceline Day plays Ida May and John Harron is the boy friend. Prominent roles in the picture are played by Ward Crane, Gertrude Astor, Elizabeth Patterson, George K. Arthur, Otto Hoffman, Mabel Turner, Gwen Lee and others.

Auto Tramps Need Good Record To Keep Moving

Automobile tramps are not faring well in Outagamie-co unless able to give a clear account of their past movements and future intentions on account of the large number of chickens being reported stolen from various sections, it was stated by Under-sheriff Earl G. Schwartz on Tuesday. Monday night a call to an isolated district of the county resulted in the detention of two men and a dilapidated touring car, without top nor springs, which was driven in to Appleton where the men and the miscellaneous equipment of camping are being held at the county jail.

The men are being investigated under the promise that they may be a pair who have been reported to be suspected of looting several chicken coops during the past 10 days. The car carried a Nevada license plate but the men claim that they are from California.

No court action has been taken pending the outcome of further investigation by the sheriff's department, it was stated.

The Abu cart road of Rajputana, India, has been macadamized and is fit for automobile traffic even in the flood season.

Refugees in Greece are becoming more efficient in carpet making and agriculture and are increasing the production in these lines.

BLUES PREPARE FOR TOUGH BATTLE WITH RIPONMEN

Reds Given Slight Edge In First Game Of Newly Formed W-I Conference

Game at Ripon Counts in W-I. Midwest Loops as Well as State Race

A battle of consequence in a game which will count toward the state collegiate title is on tap for Saturday when Coach Mark Catlin's Lawrence college gridder is scheduled to provide the feature entertainment for the Ripon college homecoming. The game is the first one of the new Wisconsin-Indiana Intercollegiate conference as well as a Midwest conference and state title battle.

Schools of the new conference are Beloit, Lawrence, Ripon, Northwestern and Lake Forest of Illinois. In the state title race Lawrence meets the Reds, Northwestern, Beloit and Carroll, the champion. In the Midwest race Beloit and Ripon have lost two games apiece and Lawrence one, though the Redmen appear stronger on paper. The battle Saturday will go a long way toward deciding which Badger college will hold the Midwest cellar though each team plays the supposedly weak Beloit crew.

The battle between the Reds and Lawrence always is one of the features of year on state college grids. The old rivalry which exists always assures a good game even though one team is supposed to outclass the other badly. It's like a Chicago-Wisconsin struggle.

A few years ago, an extra-strong Blue team which held Iowa, later led by Big Ten honors, to a close score, was tied by Ripon, 7-7, to send a large homecoming crowd home happy. Ripon had been licked right and left that year while Lawrence was winning. This year the Reds have a slight edge but the Blue gridmen are determined to turn the tables at the Red stadium.

Hard scrimmage and work in correcting faults of the Coe game is on the cards for this week. The men all will go through an intensive drill in hanging on to the pigskin, as fumbles counted heavily against them at Cedar Rapids. All of the Bluemen appear to be in good condition and are working this week with more determination than ever to wipe off the stain of the Coe loss by a triumph over the ancient foe, Ripon. Such a victory over the Reds will go a long way toward accomplishing that end. Briesse, Barrell, Dreher, Bloomer, Hunter, Nason and Heldeman alternated at the rear wall jobs. In the line Hilton, Bayes, Jessup and Hillman worked at ends; Counsell and Ott at tackles; Steensland, Weinkauf, Johnson and Artz at guards and Hipke at center.

BOB JONES FORGETS FOE AND PLAYS PAR

"Par Golf Usually With Beat Any Opponent" Says Crack Amateur

Many golfers have different systems of watching their game in match play. Many play their own game in comparison with the score of the opponent.

Bobby Jones perhaps has one of the best systems of all. In fact, despite Bobby's recent defeat at the hands of the crafty George Von Elm, it might be said that Jones' system can be accepted as one of the most substantial and logical of the lot.

"I play against par on every hole," is the way Bobby explains his golf. "It matters not to me that my opponent registers a birdie or an eagle on any particular hole. He cannot do that consistently. Par golf will, nine times out of 10, to speak, defeat any opponent one chance to find himself opposing."

After one considers Bobby Jones' system in his respect, the logic of it rapidly oozes to the surface. Before teeing off, Bobby learns what part for the hole is an regulates his strokes accordingly. It is par that troubles the open champion, not his opponent. It is doubtful if Bobby Jones realizes, as he stalks around the course, that he is doing battle on the links with anyone in particular except Old Man Par himself.

The fact that his opponent sinks a 50-foot putt or drops a 135-yard approach mashie within six inches of the pin does not disturb Jones. His morale is unshaken, his nerve is not shattered, his brain is not loaded with worry and fear that unless he duplicates the feat he will lose the hole at hand.

Many golfers worry so over the bright shots registered now and then by their opponents that they can't retain full control of themselves. Shooting strictly against par is an excellent method of eliminating the nervous strain that so frequently causes many to lose their stride and Green Bay — The Packers sing the 1926 swan song at home Sunday afternoon at the City Stadium when they take the gridiron against Racine tornadoes in a state championship series game. Following this contest, the Big Bay Blues take the road for two games in Chicago, Milwaukee, Racine, Philadelphia and Detroit.

The Horlicville combination has always been a home jinx to the Bays. As a matter of fact, records show that Racine is the only team that has ever beaten the Packers twice in the blue and gold's own back yard. This year, Racine has been having some trouble getting under way. However, Babe Reutz, the husky helmsman of the Tornadoes, claims that his postgraduate gridder is going to be on this Sunday and that the Bayites will have their hands full.

Gridiron hostilities between Green Bay and Racine started back in 1921 when the two teams met on a neutral field in Milwaukee. Thanks to a last minute place kick by Hank Gillo, Racine escaped with a 3 to 3 tie.

In 1922, the teams played three games. Racine came here first and tossed the Packers for a 10 to 0 loss. The second game, which was played in Horlickville, was another 3 to 3 tie as Hank Gillo came through in the last ten seconds to knot the count with his educated toe. The teams battled again in Milwaukee in a post season fray and the Packers copped the verdict by a 14 to 0 count. This was the year of Usher, Lyle and Rip Lauer.

1923 saw the eleven break even. Racine invaded the Bay and handed the Packers a 24 to 3 licking. It was an awful rout but a couple of weeks later Green Bay got even to the tune of 16 to 0 in a game in which Racine was outclassed far more than the score would indicate.

It was "50-50" again in 1924. Racine came here and met defeat 6-3 in a thriller. The visitors counted first on a place kick by Gillo but Tiller Vogt pulled a circus catch of a pass in the final quarter which beat back the visitors. Late in the season, the Packers invaded Horlicktown and were upset in a cold weather game, 7 to 0.

There was nothing doing last season as Racine took a vacation from the National Football circuit. Next Sunday the gridiron feud will be resumed and many of the fans are wondering if the Horlickville outfit will be just as tough a nut to crack.

ROCKNE AND HIS BOYS ARE CONSISTENT GANG

When it comes to consistency you've got to hand it to Knute Rockne and his Notre Dame gridgers. A year, this year they went one better, downing the Gophers, 20-7.

What otherwise might be a perfect defeat day.

It's system worthy of experiment by one and all.

Undaunted, the scrappy Hartford boy, who last season came back to college sports as a basketball player, has donned the molehills this year and is running wild in practice sessions. He bids fair to be one of the strongest quarters at the disposal of Coach Reggie Brown and Ed. Robinson, formerly of Brown University, now of the Boston institution.

The B. U. Terrier mentors are placing great faith in Herbert. Absolutely clear-headed in running the team, he is a scrappy fighter and a remarkable broken field runner.

COAST TRIPLE THREAT STAR ENTIRE ELEVEN IN HIMSELF

LEONARD CASSANOVA

Here's one of those "triple-threat" boys you hear so much about these days. In other words, meet Leonard Cassanova, captain of the Santa Clara university eleven. He's one of the best Coach Adam Walsh has, being the kicking and passing expert of the aggregation. Cassanova plays in the backfield and as an open field runner ranks with any in the far west sector.

Northwestern May Spill Early Dope In Big Ten

Evanson—While the majority of the critics are picking Michigan to repeat its 1925 Western Conference football conquest this season, there's one other team that must be given a bit of consideration. That's Northwestern.

The Purple, for the most part, has been sidetracked by the boys down front; in fact, many rate the Evanson eleven about seventh in the Big Ten.

This doping, however, doesn't get to first base at Evanson, where 52 varsity grid players have designs on winning the title for the Purple. These Wildcats are set to do their share of clawing for it, too.

Some will discount Northwestern's chance this year, for Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite, partly because several other conference mentors could not find an open date, provided a rather easy schedule for the Purple. All they have to do is to beat Indiana (twice), Purdue, Chicago and Iowa.

Not one of the teams considered tough in the conference, Michigan, Minnesota, Illinois, Wisconsin or Ohio State, is on the Northwestern ticket.

With the return of "Tiny" Lewis to fullback the prospects are the best since the days of Paddy Driscoll.

Lewis has been the big question mark at Northwestern all season. He wasn't ineligible, but for a while he was on one end of the strangest collection of bargains an athlete ever was involved in.

When he flunked last year the Purple faculty planned to drop him from the Evanson school. He was allowed to remain on one condition. He was to pass his examination and then keep out of athletics for one year. They passed all right, but he was suffering from that bargain. His name was down in black and white that he wouldn't play football for one year. According to the Western Conference rules he was eligible.

The whole affair was a family matter between the faculty and Lewis. The faculty finally got big-hearted. The realized that Lewis, along with Captain "Moon" Baker, and the other stars of last year's team, could help make the dedication of the new stadium a big success with a winning team, so they lifted the ban on Lewis.

Coach Thistlethwaite must select his backfield men from 18 candidates including Captain Baker, Lewis, Griffith, Holmer, Gustafson, Levison, Tannhill, Schumacher and Collin. All looked good in the preliminary games. "Duke" Dunne, line coach, is confident his forward wall will stand the gauntlet.

The Northwestern campus is a-buzz with zest and football pep and the "Go you Northwestern" cheer is being re-voiced for heavy service this season.

MORGAN HANGS ON TO LIGHTIE CROWN Junior Lightie Champ Takes Big Edge Over Dundee After Fourth Round

San Francisco—(AP)—Tod Morgan of Seattle continued his reign supreme in the division of junior lightweights. For a brief thirty minutes here Tuesday night his authority was questioned but before the battle had progressed far the challenger, Johnny Dundee of New York, had been put to rout by a barrage of flying gloves that beat a steady tattoo on the face and body.

Coming out after the fourth round Morgan drove the veteran New York boxer around the ring, landing seemingly at will both to the midsection and the face. At the finish there was no question as referee Harry Ertie raised the champion's hand.

The victory, while complete, was tempered with the knowledge that Dundee fought through most of the bout with one hand. His handlers announced that an old break in his right hand had been fractured during the second round.

Seattle—Solly Seaman, New York, defeated Phil Salvatore, Los Angeles (6).

MICHIGAN FAVORED TO DOWN ILLINOIS ITS LEADING FOE

Two Injuries Cut Down Chances of Illini; Purple Hopes to Beat Rockne

Chicago—(AP)—Michigan's chances of retaining the Big Ten title it won last year are at stake in Saturday's game with Illinois, 1925 runnerup and leading challenger this fall, but almost as much interest has been attached toward the Chicago-Purdue clash, in which two dark horses will show their conference speed.

The 1926 model of the Maroon machine which claimed the championship two years ago, battered and shaken by last Saturday's decisive defeat at Pennsylvania's hands, faces the test of the year in Purdue, never a strong contender for grid honors but since its holding of Wisconsin to a scoreless tie now rated a dark horse in the autumn's title fight.

Purdue, swinging from a strong stand against Navy to the holding of the Badgers last week, appears in the midst of a climb that makes Pheasant's fighting squad a favorite to down Stage in the 35th consecutive year of his coaching.

Having downed Iowa last week which they were unable to do a year ago, the Illini go to Ann Arbor for what is generally considered the year's championship game. The absence of Ombrosio at end and Timm at half for Illinois from injuries, is a factor in the rating of Michigan's favorite.

Northwestern tests its chances in the conference race in Saturday's non-conference tilt with Rockne's Notre Dame eleven, annually a Big Ten stumbling block and already this fall conqueror of Minnesota. The Purple smothered Indiana as the latest move in a fall campaign so far notably successful.

Minnesota views the game with Wabash, Saturday's other non-conference affair with optimism. Spears, encouraged by the Gophers showing in Michigan's victory, thinks the contest will further temper his varsity for the remainder of the Big Ten games.

Wisconsin is working for Indiana to develop the offense which failed to materialize against Purdue, while Pat Page sees in his second conference game a chance for Indiana's first Big Ten conquest in more than three seasons.

The Ohio State triumph over Columbia in New York last week makes the Buckeyes favorites over Iowa, eager to offset the defeat at the hands of an Illinois without the aid of the Grange who bothered the Hawkeyes for three long years.

HOPPY WIENERS TAKE MATCH FROM WHALES

In the final game another win of 134 pins gave the Wieners the match.

F. Felt of the winners had high series of the fray, a 574, and a teammate, Frank Fries, had high single game, a 254. For the losers Currie had high series, 561, and Koletzke had high game, 211. Other 200 scores went to Currie with 205, Strutz with 209, and Felt with 222.

TULANS SEES CLASSY GRIDDER IN MENVILLE

New Orleans—In Johnny Menville, Tulane university believes it has a coming star on the football field.

Menville, a quarterback, is being rated one of the best line plungers in Dixie. That's saying more than a little, considering Menville has had but little big-time experience. In Tulane's early season games the youngster has been one of the outstanding ground gainers on the team. He may not be another Peggy Flounry, 1925 sensation, but he's off to a great start, nevertheless.

Menville is something of a triple-threat boy. For aside from his ability as a ball carrier he can also punt and pass—quite a drop kicker in the bargain, too.

"HAIR-GROOM" Keeps Hair Combed, Glossy Well-Groomed all Day

"Hair-Groom" is a dignified combing cream which costs only a few cents a jar at any drug store. Millions use it because it gives that natural gloss and well-groomed effect to the hair—that final touch to good dress both in business and on social occasions. Even stubborn, unruly or shampooed hair stays combed all day in any style you like. "Hair-Groom" is greaseless; also helps grow thick, heavy, lustrous hair.

Thus the toasting process is an addition. It adds a unique and distinct improvement to a cigarette that has already been made from the finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos. It is the reason millions prefer Lucky Strikes.

Dave's Dots And Dashes

There's at least one person in the valley who still believes in that time worn idea that relative strength of teams can be judged by comparative scores. Most modern people are right in believing that true only in cases where scores are so large that there is no chance for an argument. But when scores are not more than a touchdown difference the "old-fashioned" comparative score idea must go into the ashcan. If you don't believe it ask the Michigan team which played Northwestern. Also other teams which ran up scores on squads which beat a next week opponent only to lose to that opponent.

Anyway when Manitowoc beat Fondy, 13-7, a week after Fondy trounced Appleton 19-6, Manitowoc sports followers were sure that Manitowoc was a sure two touchdown better than Appleton in spite of the Orange win at the Ships own ball yard. It must be so for comparative scores show it, but comparative scores can't take away that Appleton win which Manitowoc "claims" was hers by two markers. Appleton played poor ball against Fondy the last half. The Orange should have won had it played like it did against the Ships.

Manitowoc says "Say what you may about comparing scores and judging thereby, but Manitowoc is two touchdowns better than Appleton any old day." Then why didn't Manitowoc get two more than Appleton? A problem for Edison himself to work. Off days and a few outside facts which must be considered are what wreck comparative score comparisons.

When the Racine Tornadoes invade Green Bay Sunday for a game in the state title series as well as to wind up the Bays home card, a man familiar to Lawrence fans will be at the fullback job. Raymond "Champ" Boettcher, the Blue plunging fullback of the last two years, is that man. Champ also played end last year and fullback at Lawrence a few years ago. He alternated at a fullback and line berth for Racine until last week when his previous good work gave him the call at fullback the entire game. Many Lawrentians, especially his frat brothers, will go to the Bay to see Champ in action.

Basketball moguls from some ten valley cities will go together in Green Bay on Wednesday for the purpose of putting finishing touches to the organization of a basketball circuit. As yet, the make up of the wheel is not fully decided but there probably will be eight "spokes" in the chase.

Dear Dave,
A lot has been said about how badly the W. Bay team stopped the Kawmen in that great game at the Bay last Saturday. But not one word has been said about the fact that the Baymen outweighed "Tiger Bill's" crew by an average of 17 pounds. And not a word has been said about the splendid fight shown by the Kawmen in the face of sure defeat against a team that was twice its size. I say that Kaukauna team is of championship caliber.

Packer Quarterback Gave Youthful Huler Chance To Fan Him In Ball Game

Pid Purdy Pulls Hot One for Big League Scouts in Game at Lincoln

Pid Purdy, diminutive sensation of the Green Bay Packer backfield, has been given lots of newspaper space in the last eight years on his great work both on the grid and diamond, but here's a new story about the Bay signal yodeller that's too good to keep. Tommy Mills, former Beloit mentor, now at Notre Dame with Knute Rockne, tells this one about his former grid satellite. Fans who saw Pid Mills a 55-yard dropkick by about an inch a few weeks ago in a Packer game will be inclined to believe it.

It seems that a few weeks ago Lincoln and Des Moines mixed in a Western league game and the latter team started a youngster on the hill. Purdy at the time had gone 59 games without striking out and four major league scouts were draped in a box just behind the home plate. As Pid walked to the platter he called in a loud voice to the Des Moines hurler, "Well, Boy, here's a chance to make yourself famous. I've gone 59 games without whiffing that old ozone and if you don't stop me it will be 60."

As the scouts were imbibing all this, Pid added, "I'll tell you what I'll do—I'll spot you two strikes. Just lay a pair through here and I won't even offer at them."

Sure enough the Des Moines hurler zipped two straight right through the heart of the plate without Purdy even taking his bat off his shoulder.

"Now," shouted Purdy, "I'm going to knock your feet right out from under you."

The third pitch whistled up to the plate shoulder high. Pid took a toe hold, struck viciously at the speeding

HARVARD'LL HAVE TO IMPROVE FROM NOW

Coach Arnold Horween of the Harvard football team says his club is showing much improvement as season skips along. It will have to the Cambridge outfit is to compile a sort of a winning mark. From until the end of the chase Harvard meets one tough opponent after another.

"FROSTY" PETERS IS CAMPAIGN FIREMAN

"Frosty" Peters, who stacked up with Kauts of Iowa, in last week's battle and won the stands with drop kicking toe, went to practice Tuesday from the Champaign house where he is a duly commissioned member of the company that sheltered him.

The Montana youth will be off duty until the end of the football season.

All You Expect

To become a Lucky Strike smoker makes one more critical of cigarettes. But in Luckies you enjoy the results of an added process of toasting.

Utter standards no longer appeal. For in Lucky Strikes you get the choicest Turkish and domestic tobaccos, properly aged and perfectly blended—and something more.

If judged only by comparison of In Lucky Strikes you find:

1. Finer Flavor. Toasting for 45 minutes develops the hidden flavors of the world's finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos.
2. Smoothness. Toasting for 45 minutes removes all "bite" and harshness, hence never any throat irritation.
3. Freshness. Then the tobacco is suddenly chilled. This seals the flavor in and insures constant freshness.

Thus the toasting process is an addition. It adds a unique and distinct improvement to a cigarette that has already been made from the finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos. It is the reason millions prefer Lucky Strikes.

SAINT AND SINNER

By Anne Austin

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE CHERRY LANE is utterly different from the latter, FAITH, who stays at home and does all the work for the family of six, including—

Her semi-invalid mother, her father, who is a carpenter and contractor in a small way; her brother, JUNIOR, or "Long" Lane, 21, and JOE, nine.

Cherry, the first, is carrying on affairs with a dozen admirers, including CHESTER HART, formerly a suitor of Faith's BOB HATHAWAY, a young architect; ALBERT ETTLESON, a married traveling salesman; old MR. CLUNY, Cherry's present employer, and CHRIS WILEY, a doctor whom a girl has committed suicide.

GEORGE FRUITT, rich man's son and amateur artist, falls in love with Faith, but she cares only for Bob Hathaway, who is infatuated with Cherry.

Fruitt showers Faith with at least a dozen gifts, including a new dress, a fur coat, a diamond ring, and a car. He is preparing for an all-day Sunday date with George, Faith, in hunting for a hat in Cherry's closet, finds Cherry's suitcase packed with nearly all her clothes and jewelry. The memory of a mysterious telegram received by Cherry from Albert Ettleson fills Faith's mind with foreboding suspicions, but since George has arrived, she has no time to talk with Cherry.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHERRY LANE, who had been snatching up the white felt hat that had been crushed under a corner of the heavy suitcase, Faith adjusted it at Cherry's mirror and hastened to the living room to rescue George from the embarrassing questions of her mother.

"Hello, George," she gave him a comradely handshake. "Where's Junior? I want to speak to him before I leave."

"Out in the back yard, tinkering with his Ford," her father told her. "Want to come with me and see Junior's store on wheels?" she invited George. "He's awfully proud of being an automobile accessories salesman. He sells to the garage all over the country, direct from the wholesalers, on a commission basis. Be sure to tell him your truck body is artistic. He painted it himself."

They found Junior, in khaki overalls, industriously assorting his stock, which he carried in a green-and-red striped bag, set on the striped chain of an old Ford touring car. After George Pruitt had paid the requested compliment, Faith drew Junior aside, with a smile of apology to George.

"Junior, promise me you'll not say a word to Cherry or to anyone else about this," she began in a low voice, then told him of the packed and locked suitcase in Cherry's closet. "I want you to get that suitcase out of the house without anyone seeing you, and lock it up in your car until I get home this evening. You're not going to use the car, are you?"

"No, going out with Fay in her bus," he told her, frowning with bewilderment. "Say, what's the kid up to? You'd better tell Dad—"

"No, there may not be a thing wrong, and I hate to have her mad at me," and Faith shook her head determinedly. "Just that for me, won't you, 'Long'?" she coaxed, calling him by the nickname she had used since she was a little girl. "I've been like a rat gnawing at the bars of a trap. Want to get away, do big things, feel big thrills, see strange sights away, always away."

"I galloped around the world when I was twenty-two, just out of college; then I trotted away a year in India, trying to paint great pictures. Finding I couldn't—" He brushed his free hand across his eyes, then looked at the girl beside him with a sudden vivid smile that made his homely, strong face almost handsome. "And so I came back to sell wholesale groceries. And then I found what I had been rushing all over the world for, looking for like a crazy person."

"You found yourself," Faith said gently. "That is the only real peace you took the true measure of your self, and have come home to live—to live really, deeply, from within, not to rush about, chasing will-o-the-wisps. You may sell wholesale groceries, or radio receiving sets, or Ford parts, or do any one of a hundred things, but if you hold fast to yourself, feed dreams to your soul, worship beauty prayerfully—"

"How did you know?" he asked wonderingly, his freckled, broad hands gripping the wheel. "Do you mind if we don't talk for a while? I want to think—there's something I have to work out, if I can, alone."

She was thinking of Cherry, of that mysterious packed and locked suitcase, but George Pruitt thought she was searching her own heart for the exact truth about her feeling for him.

When they arrived at Sulphur Springs, a popular resort in the mountains, George ordered lunch served at a secluded little table on the veranda of the rambling, rustic hotel. She found herself studying him intently as he gave the order to the waiter in his friendly, courteous way. He knew so definitely what he wanted but there was no ostentation in his manner. He spent money in tellingly like a man who had always had it.

While they were waiting for their food, he drew a thin, leather-bound book of shaw's poems from his pocket and read aloud to her, his rather thick lips tasting the salt of the humor with relish, his small keen eyes boring into hers occasionally, as if anxious to see if she "got" it.

"You know—" he threw the book down, the waiter came up with a covered plate of fried chicken. "I wanted to read poetry to you today, but I didn't dare. These potatoes au gratin look good, don't they? Do you know, I love to see you eat! You never make coy remarks about calories and starches and carbohydrates and all that rot. You never fish for compliments, do you? Every other girl I know remarks prettily that she oughtn't to touch potatoes or white bread, and that's my cue to say, Oh, my dear! Why should you diet? You're exactly the right weight! I don't have to listen for cues when I'm talking with you, Lemon for your tea?"

"I'm going to have some deep dish green apple pie and cheese for dessert, if that suits you. I know their cook here—she used to work for us—and until you've eaten some of Elsie's green apple pie, you haven't really eaten pie."

How comfortable it would be to live with this man, who had made an art of living, who had money, had always had it, would undoubtedly always have it! How kind and thoughtful he was! What a charming companion he made!

He treated her as a mental equal, despite the fact that he had traveled, had gone through college had lived in Paris and New York, while she had spent her life in a small inland city, with only a few high school honors to prove that she had any brains at all.

No one else had ever read Shaw to her, or had dreamed that she would be interested in him. No one else knew that she had read and collected books in the public library, that she was starved for someone to talk books with.

"You look as if you're doing a weighty problem in mental arithmetic," he told her.

"I was—a problem in addition," she said slowly. "And now I have to do another in subtraction."

"I hope your heavy mental labor isn't going to keep you from your fried chicken and asparagus." He kept his voice gay but his eyes were startled, apprehensive.

"He's all that—a companion, a mental stimulus, a charming, cultivated man, able to give me all the things I've never had and that every girl wants, and—I don't love him." She concluded her problem in mental arithmetic by making that fatal subtraction. "And it's all nothing, if I don't love him. Oh, I wish I had never met Bob Hathaway!" she told herself with such fierceness that she was afraid for a moment that she had spoken out loud.

"Was the answer—wrong?" Pruitt laid down his fork and leaned across the table to gaze compellingly into her eyes.

"No, I got the right answer. I'm sure it was the right answer." Her voice shook a little. "Oh, George, we're playing a foolish game of cross questions and crooked answers. Let's be sensible. Where are you going to sketch this afternoon?"

"There's a little mountain stream and a three-foot waterfall, about a mile up that road." He pointed off to the right. "Good enough for sketching. But what I'd like to do is to start a portrait of you—sitting on a great bald rock, perched on a mountain—can you see it over there?"

She strained her eyes, shed them with her hand. A boulder that looked as if it had merely hesitated on its plunge down the mountainside, was etched sharply against the intense blue of the sky. She shook her head slightly.

"Cherry needn't know," he urged. "I'll even paint her, to keep her from being jealous. Oh, she's pretty, beautiful, I suppose you'd say, but she's not like you."

"There's peace in just being with you," he told her after a long while, during which they had not spoken. "Do you know, I've never been really at peace before in my life? Ever since I was a homely, red-headed, freckled little kid, I've been like a rat gnawing at the bars of a trap. Want to get away, do big things, feel big thrills, see strange sights away, always away."

"I galloped around the world when I was twenty-two, just out of college; then I trotted away a year in India, trying to paint great pictures. He leaned forward to watch him, so far that her sleek brown head almost touched the rust-red shock that made his big, squarish head look bigger than it really was. He breathed deeply at that threatened contact, and his hand shook a little as he guided his pencil rapidly.

"I look like a feminine edition of Rodin's 'The Thinker,'" she laughed throatily.

"My idea was something like that," he acknowledged, "but more specific. You see—the pleasant green mountains of adventures—in which she has been happy, carefree. She has come to the jumping-off place, literally—marriage, you know. And as she sits there on the rock, her last foothold, she broods, yearns toward what lies below and beyond. Children, fulfillment of her nature, the lush green meadows of motherhood and wifehood and complete womanhood, provided she doesn't break her fine, splendid body to bits in the plunge."

"Do you see? I'm not much good at putting things in words, or into colors, either, for that matter. But I believe I could do this picture as it should be done, but there's only one model in the world that could make the picture come alive under my hands. Please, Faith, please?" his voice rose on a pleading questioning note.

Again she shook her head, dumbly. If she allowed him to paint her—like that—she would be giving him the answer he wanted, and which she knew she could never give.

"I want to see you sketch the waterfall," she told him compassionately. "If she had not met Bob Hathaway—"

Two hours later he kicked over his easel furiously and came striding to where she was sitting in the grass, her strong, straight back against the trunk of a tree, her great, serene eyes drowsy with content, her pale face dappled with sunshine filtering through the busy, whispering leaves. "Faith," he said dropping down beside her, leaning so close that his breath was hot on her face, "I'll die if I can't kiss you. But it's got to be because you want me to. I don't understand—any other girl I should have kissed as soon as I wanted to—Faith, Faith! I can't stand it any longer—"

One of her big cool hands curled gently about his hot cheek. Without a word she lifted her face, offered her steady lips to his trembling mouth. (TO BE CONTINUED)

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing it is a mixture, though, at home, messy and troublesome. For only 75 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray faded hair, though no disgrace is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

YOUTHS GUILTY OF DAMAGING PROPERTY

Two Are Paroled to Relatives; Third Is Ordered from City for Year

Special to Post-Crescent
New London—Answering to a charge of malicious destruction of property in Judge Martin's court at Waupaca on Monday, three youths of this city pleaded guilty. One was ordered to remain out of the city for a year, while the other two probably will be paroled to relatives.

Complaint against them was entered by members of the school board of the Leeman district school last week. The school had been closed for the week for the potato harvest. The local lads also had been engaged in picking up potatoes but, tiring of this, set out for the school nearby. Finding it locked, they began an extended siege of destruction. Nearly every window was broken, and after gaining entrance the lads completely riddled the interior, strewn material about, destroying books, upsetting desks and finally removing all they could conveniently upon their persons. The damage done was estimated at about two hundred dollars.

A check up on those who had been seen in the neighborhood resulted in the arrest of the youths Monday. This is their second offense of the kind, the first being last spring when they invaded the Toddler Togs building after the Community fair.

Women who are nervous and irritable, have restless sleep and a poor appetite, are often suffering from lack of hemoglobin in the blood. The very FIRST week you take Vinol, the life-giving hemoglobin in your blood begins to increase. Soon you feel stronger, your blood is richer, you eat better and sleep better. Just ONE bottle of Vinol shows surprising results, though more should be taken in obstinate cases. Vinol has been prescribed for over 25 years for weak, nervous women, tired men and frail children. A simple, strengthening iron and cod liver tonic. Very pleasant to take. Your's Drug Store.

SPONSORS REALIZE LITTLE FROM COOK BOOK ADVERTISING

Chamber of Commerce
Frowns on Money Raising Attempt

Advertising solicitation being conducted in the city for a cook book to be sold by a women's church society does not have the approval of the chamber of commerce, it was announced at the chamber offices.

Although the merchant is given the impression that the society is receiving the money for the advertising, the publishers of the cook book are the sole benefactors, it is pointed out. The only person in the society to profit financially from the undertaking is the one accompanying the solicitor.

The entire plan, in brief, is this, according to the chamber of commerce. A representative of the publishers comes to the city, gets in touch with some women's church society, and asks its representatives if it wishes to earn $400 or $500, whichever the case may be. Naturally most societies, not being familiar with such undertakings, accept the offer in good faith, and agree to carry out the proposed plans.

The plans consist of selling advertising to local merchants for the cook book which will be sold to housewives here. The book usually sells for $1, and any number from 400 to 500 books is given societies for disposal in cities of this size.

The society, however, does not receive a cent of money paid by the merchants for advertising. The only remuneration it can realize is from the sale of the books and past experiences have proven that not more than a few hundred books can be disposed of.

The society now sponsoring the solicitation was not fully aware of the plans when it agreed to the plan, it is said, and any merchants who have purchased advertising space and who do not feel as though they will receive 100 cents of advertising value on the dollar may cancel their orders, officials of the society have declared.

BUILD NEW HOME FOR KIMBERLY LOCKTENDER

The lock tender's home at the Cedar's lock at Kimberly was removed from its foundation Monday to one side to make room for a new home. The house is to be built by Albert Luckow, Kaukauna contractor, at a cost of approximately $8,400.

During the time the new home is being built the locktender and his family will live in the old residence. The old building will be used as a storehouse for government tools, according to E. F. Everett, United States engineer.

BEET HARVEST WILL START WITHIN WEEK

The sugar-beet harvesting season will open along the east shore of Lake Winnebago within the next week, according to E. F. Everett, United States engineer and preparations are being made to haul the beets across the lake on barges. An automatic loader is to be installed at Stockbridge Harbor for unloading the beets from the wagons to the boats.

Farmers will haul the beets to this point where they will be loaded on boats and taken across the lake to Oshkosh. Here they will be transferred to railroad cars and taken to the Menominee Sugar Beet company factory at Green Bay.

BADGER FROSH GIVE VARSITY A BATTLE

Work of John Cavosie, Iron-wood Triple-threater, Is Outstanding

Madison—The University of Wisconsin Freshmen football squad, under the direction of Coach Glenn Holmes, is furnishing the Varsity with some real competition these fall afternoons. This week they are working on Hoosier plays and formations secured by Badger scouts who have been following Indians. A total of 160 men are included on the roster of the Fresh squad. These men are divided into two sections of 80 each one division taking the field on Tuesday and Thursday, and the other on Monday and Wednesday.

They have proven themselves worthy competition for the Badger Varsity, and there is some keen competition for the coveted green jerseys. The outstanding man of the squad is John Cavosie, who hails from Ironwood, Mich. Cavosie has made a great record in high school and without a doubt is Varsity material. Cavosie is a "triple threat man." In addition to carrying the ball, he is an excellent punter and drop kicker, and his passes are fast and straight to the men. Fishleigh, who made a name for himself at Stevens Point, has shown well at quarterback and is a competent running mate for Cavosie. Hayes, a product of the Mooseheart, Ill., High school, has exhibited great power at fullback. Pat Mohardt, of Gary, Indiana, brother of the former Notre Dame star, has proven himself a halfback of real ability. Other men who have shown well in scrimmages are: Murphy, halfback and Miller, quarterback.

In the line the outstanding man is Rader, a crack center from Steel High school at Layton, Ohio. O'Connor, whose home is Fargo, North Dakota, has performed in good style at end. He was picked on the All-American High School Basketball five at Stagg's National tournament in Chicago last winter. Cocksey, who is a product of Texas, is a fine extremity man. Others who will be watched with interest are: Schumacher and McKaskle, tackles, and Jones and Parks, guards.

A football league composed of two yearling eleven, the All-American, a group of sophomores and ineligibles, and a team of physical education men have been formed to provide Badger Fans with grid games when the Badger varsity is performing abroad.

Good progress has been made on filling in the west end of the ravine between W. Washington-st. and W. College-ave. and it is expected that the street department will be able to start work on the new thoroughfare to be constructed between these two streets at a point just east of the Wenzel Plumbing company within the next two weeks.

While many people had been dumping rubbish into the ravine for some time, no concentrated effort to build across the ravine was started until about a month ago. At that time the city council authorized the building of a roadway connecting the two streets and R. F. Hackworthy, street commissioner, gave orders to concentrate the dumping of rubbish at the west end. Rubbish from the Rissman Wrecking company, which tearing down several buildings on N. Superior-st. has helped greatly in filling the proposed roadway.

WAS A GOOD JUDGE OF LIQUOR

"Since a young man I had liking for liquor and was considered a pretty good judge of it one time, but constant drinking gave me stomach trouble which became chronic. My stomach would have been a valuable addition to a gas factory. Doctors did not seem to relieve me. One day my druggist got me to try MAYER'S, and I am now as good as new." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. All druggists.

MANY MEMBERS OF ALIMONY CLUB ARE IN POOR STANDING

As the Alimony club, that exclusive organization of disillusioned husbands sponsored by the Outagamie-co. circuit courts, grows steadily larger with the passing months the number of members who are in bad standing increases proportionately. It was reported by Harry A. Shannon, clerk of circuit and municipal courts.

Whereas failure to pay dues in an ordinary club is punishable at most by arbitrary expulsion and erasure from the membership rolls, in the alimony organization differs to the extent that arrears in dues may mean an extended stay as a house guest of the county—behind the bars of the county jail.

At present, Mr. Shannon pointed out, the local club boasts between 60 and 75 members and in most instances a remainder is sufficient to bring a lax former husband to the counter with his cash. However, where members means fall the court issues a warrant and contempt proceedings follow.

At that time the city council authorized the building of a roadway connecting the two streets and R. F. Hackworthy, street commissioner, gave orders to concentrate the dumping of rubbish at the west end. Rubbish from the Rissman Wrecking company, which tearing down several buildings on N.
